FRIDAY, JANUARY 28, 1898.

THE post office committee of the Senate has prepared and offered a bill providing for the full prepayment of letters mailed in any post office before despatch to destination. We believe such a law would be both unnecessary and unreasonable, and would cause much delay in the delivery of mail matter. We are convinced that short payment on any class of mail matter is through inadvertence and seldom if ever done willfully. If any loss results to the government under the present law it is the fault of the postal service and its employes, rather than the public, and if postal employes carelessly forward and deliver short paid mail matter without collecting the amount due it is not the fault of the public, nor should they be deprived of prompt service for that reason. It would be much better to provide by law that all classes of mail matter on which payment by means of postage stamps is made, should be dispatched to destination, and if short paid marked with the amount due, to be collected when delivered. The public would then receive prompt and efficient service and if the postal employes attended to their part of the business properly the government would suffer no loss.

If you have land for sale advertise in THE OUTLOOK.

Obituary.

The death of Mrs. J. L. Bagg of Syracuse, N. Y., at the Holly Inn on Sunday evening, January 23d, cast a gloom over all residents of Pinehurst. Three years ago she had a severe stroke of paralysis, but had been steadily gaining, especially since her return to Pinehurst this season. Her devoted husband had been greatly encouraged by her progress toward recovery. This made the blow all the more severe. He has the consolation of knowing that nothing which loving hearts could suggest has been wanting on the part of himself and Miss Redfield in ministering to her daily comfort and happiness. They have the heartfelt sympathy of all who had the pleasure of their acquaintance. They will all be sadly missed from the village and the Inn.

Mrs. Bagg was a woman of unusual ability and usefulness. She was a natural leader in her church and social relations in her native city. Always ready to help in every good cause, she gave freely her time and talents to the work of bettering the world around her. She was a woman of strong convictions and of a deeply religious nature. She was a member of the May Memorial (Unitarian) church of Syracuse, where her life and services will be fittingly commemorated.
