hotel—The Berkshire—and several other buildings were erected.

When the doors were opened in the fall of 1898 Mr. Tufts might well have considered that ample provision had been made to accommodate all who might come. But the fame of this little universe of health and happiness had extended far and wide, and the little village that had grown up in the wilderness in less than four years, made another giant stride into popular favor and grandly eclipsed the successes of all previous years. The season brought a host of new faces, and a large proportion of those who had previously learned to appreciate the exceptional advantages offered at this charming resort returned once more. Ere the winter was half over the village was filled to its utmost capacity, and the number of people who were turned away because of lack of room would easily have filled another village of the same size.

Again an effort has been made to provide accommodations equal to the demand, and the past summer has been a season of great activity in the building line.

A new mammoth hotel—the Carolina—has been built, the Hotel Berkshire, which was new last year, has been enlarged to double its former capacity, several other buildings have been erected, and numerous improvements have been made throughout the village.

Pinehurst now contains over fifty houses of various sizes and styles. All are plastered and painted, and in every way substantially built from designs of Kendall, Taylor & Stevens, Burr & Sise, and other well-known Boston architects. Perfect sanitary protection in each house is afforded by water closets connected with the sewerage system.

The largest building in the village is the new Carolina, which is also the largest hotel in the state. It is right up-to-date in every respect, with appointments calculated to suit the most fastidious tastes. The quiet home-like Holly Inn and the cozy Berkshire are both model hotels containing every modern comfort and convenience, and with the luxurious Carolina form a trio of hostleries of which any town might well be proud. All are under the management of experienced men who have made enviable reputations in their line of business, and their prices are remarkably moderate when the character of the accommodations afforded are considered.

The Pinehurst Casino is a fine large building centrally located, and is one of the most popular institutions in the village. It contains an excellent restaurant where the cottagers or those lodging in the numerous apartment houses may obtain table board. The has been added, and the patrons of the store will be able to obtain meats, fish, produce and other perishable goods in first class condition. A large circulating library, comprising popular fiction and standard literature, is located here. This building also contains the offices of the village superintendent and his assistants, the money order post office, and a telegraph and telephone office.

The Schoolhouse is located at the foot of the Village Green, and is surrounded by ample play grounds. Competent teachers are in charge of the school, and parents may be assured that their children can enjoy educational advantages equal to those at their Northern homes.

The Museum is an old log cabin erected nearly one hundred years ago, and until very recently was occupied as a dwelling. The huge fireplace with its chimney of sticks and mud occupies nearly the whole of one end. It shelters an interesting collection of relics of by-gone days, including hand loom, spinning wheels, ancient cooking utensils, and the hand-made axe with which the logs composing the building deer park containing several acres is located here and is the home of a herd of tame deer.

Abundant facilities for amusement and recreation are to be found in Pinehurst, where the clear blue sky, bright warm sunshine and dry invigorating air tempt even the invalid to spend most of his waking hours out of doors throughout the winter. Foremost among them is the golf links—undoubtedly the finest 18-hole links in the South—covering over one hundred and fifty acres. A detailed description of the links will be found on another page.

There are also excellent grounds for expert croquet (or Roque, as it is now called), tennis courts, bowling alleys, bicycle track and expert traps with club house for trap shooters. Billiards, pool, shuffleboard and quoits are also provided for, with sand courts, swings and other diversions for children. Dancing and orchestral concerts in the music rooms of the several hostleries and in the Village Hall serve to make the time pass pleasantly, and numerous musical and literary entertainments are provided.

building also contains a ladies' parlor, smoking and game rooms, and a reading room supplied with the leading periodicals for the free use of the villagers. Bath rooms are also located here.

The Village Hall is a handsome building with seating capacity for four hundred people. It contains a large stage with dressing rooms, scenery, and all the paraphernalia for amateur theatricals. The village entertainments are held here during the week, and on Sunday religious services are conducted by clergymen of different denominations.

The Department Store is a fine large building covering more ground space than any other store building in the county. It contains a large stock of general merchandise, including a fine line of heavy and fancy groceries, dry and fancy goods, men's furnishings, boots and shoes, drugs and medicines, hardware, meat and fish—in fact everything that can be found in the average New England village. This season a new cold storage and ice-making plant were hewn ready for their place.

THE PINEHURST OUTLOOK, the village weekly newspaper, has its home in the Outlook building. It furnishes the local news and entertaining reading matter. A series of articles describing the many places of interest near the village is in course of preparation, and will appear in its columns from time to time. In the basement of the Outlook building is located the Pinehurst Bottling Works, where carbonated drinks from the Pinehurst Spring water are prepared for shipment.

The Steam Laundry is well equipped with modern machinery and in charge of competent workmen. It is located just outside the town limits. Prices for work are about the same as in the North.

A pleasing feature of the village is a beautiful grove of the stately long-leaf pine, situated just inside of the fence on the south side of the town. Numerous seats and swings are scattered about among the grand old trees, and the place is a favorite resort for the villagers. A

Walks, rides and drives prove very attractive, and picnics in the beautiful pine groves may be enjoyed even in mid-winter. A large new livery stable has been erected this season, and it is well-equipped with fine carriages and horses suitable for both driving and riding.

Cleanliness is a cardinal virtue in Pinehurst. There are no "back yards"—in the generally accepted sense of that term—and no outbuildings. The grounds in the rear of the cottages are kept as neat and attractive as those in front, and
