Resignation of Mr. C. D. Benbow.

It was a surprise to most of the residents of Pinehurst to learn that Mr. C. D. Benbow, who for the past four years has been resident superintendent, had resigned his position and would leave this village.

In the four years that Mr. Benbow has been in Pinehurst, much has been done under his direction to make this village the ideal winter resort planned by the owner. He has, by his uniformly, courteous manner, endeared himself to the many visitors from the North who always felt that they could go to Mr. Benbow and he would do everything in his power to make them comfortable.

Under his direction the several additions to the Holly Inn have been made, the Magnolia has been enlarged, the Mystic and several other cottages have been built, and the new hotel, the Carolina, the largest hotel in the State, has been completed.

Mr. Benbow has not only succeeded in winning golden opinions from the visitors, but early won and held the respect and love of those who, under his direction, have done the work which has made Pinehurst what it is. One and all they say, they regret the fact that he has been called away.

Mr. Benbow goes from here to his old home, Greensboro, N. C., where, in company with his father, they are building a large hotel, and where he has large business interests which demand his attention. Mr. Benbow desires to express through THE OUTLOOK, his thanks to the heads of the various departments to whom he says the credit belongs for the good work which has been done.

We know we but voice the sentiments of all when we wish him all success in business and propose as toast a long and happy life to our genial friend, C. D. Benbow.

How to Prepare Kohlrabi.

Peel, cut into thin slices, cook in boiling salted water until tender. Place a small piece of lard or butter in another pot, add a little onion chopped finely and about a tablespoonful or more of flour. Fry to a light brown and then add enough boiling water to make a smooth sauce. Add salt and pepper and to this add the kohlrabi and cook a little while longer. Have enough sauce to avoid scorching or add some boiling water if necessary.

The top greens may be cooked also and either served separately or mixed with the kohlrabi. Cook them in boiling water, chop and add a small amount to kohlrabi or serve extra like spinach.

PINEHURST NURSERIES.

An Uncongenial Environment.

Sunday school teacher (looking around the class)—Boys, isn't this class smaller than usual?

Boys (in chorus)—Yes'm; that little boy 'at wared th' Bryan button says he's quit.—Indianapolis Journal.

The Truth About.

"Ah, well, a man never gets too old to learn."

"You mean a man never gets old enough to admit there is anything he could not learn if he had a mind to."—Indianapolis Press.
