In the Interest of Science.

When one's friend is a scientist and given to experiments, a little caution may not be out of place before consenting to do him a favor. That, however, did not occur to a certain well-known public man whose experience is related in an Australian paper.

He went to the laboratory of an old schoolmate, a Melbourne professor of chemistry, to make a friendly call. The professor was studying a dark brown substance spread out on a sheet of paper.

"I say," he cried when greetings had been exchanged, "would you kindly let me place a bit of this on your tongue? My taste has become vitiated by trying all sorts of things."

"Certainly," responded the accommodating friend, and he promptly opened his mouth.

The professor took up some of the substance under analysis and put it on his friend's tongue. The man worked it around in his mouth for fully a minute, tasting it much as if he might have tasted a choice confection.

"Note any effect?" asked the professor.

"No, none."

"It doesn't paralyze or prick your tongue?"

"Not that I can detect."

"I thought not. There are no alkaloids in it, then. How does it taste?"

"Bitter as gall."

"Hem-m-m! All right."

By this time the visitor's curiosity was aroused. "But what is it, anyhow?" he inquired.

"I don't know. That's what I'm trying to find out. Some one has been poisoning horses with it."

Friend—"So the editor sends you his paper free?" Poet—"Yes; he says I needn't subscribe if I won't contribute any more."—Exchange.

"See my lovely new oriental screen." "Yes. Is it one that folds when you don't want it to or one that won't fold when you do want it to?"—Chicago Record.

"Henry came home furious last night." "What was the matter, daughter?" "Why, mamma, I had put two eggs in his luncheon and forgot to cook them."—Detroit Free Press.

"Did you ever notice signs of mental weakness in the accused!" "Well, I dunno as to whether you'd call it mental weakness or not, but I never could account for one singular habit he had." "What was it?" "Why he'd read the woman's page in the Sunday paper!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
