Seed of Pinehurst's Long-Leaf Pine Goes to Many Countries.

Just at present the Pinehurst Nurseries are not particularly attractive in appearance to the eye of the layman. Nature is taking a brief rest, preparing to make a dazzling appearance in the Spring, which is not far distant, but a visit by one familiar with horticulture, to this important department in the equipment of Pinehurst, is always a source of pleasure and instruction, and even the uninitiated may enjoy much of this pleasure by making the rounds with the manager, Otto Katzenstein. Mr. Katzenstein not only possesses knowledge, but he is also gifted with a rare power to transmit it to others. During his management here he has done much in making Pinehurst and its long-leaf pine, known to all parts of the civilized world.

The Equipment.

The Nurseries embrace over sixty-five acres, and in connection is a Greenhouse Department consisting of two greenhouses, one for single and the other for double violets, another for pot plants and cut flowers and a large seed storage house.

The Nurseries are devoted mainly to hardy plants and shrubs which are indigenous to this section of North Carolina. Many of these varieties are grown by the tens of thousands and even at this enormous rate the supply does not begin to satisfy the demand, and extensive enlargement is contemplated. Just at present a large force of workmen are busy propagating for next seasons output which will exceed half a million a week.

Much space is devoted to hardy American shrubs, perennials and sub-tropical plants, a speciality being made of the introduction of new and rare hardy shrubs which are discovered from time to time, by the Nurseries own collectors and prospectors, on their various trips about the country.

A Recent Discovery.

The most remarkable and a recent discovery in this line is the Silver Cork Fir, "Abies Arizonica, Merr." Its foliage resembles that of the Balsam Fir, but is silver-white, with the bark of the trunk and branches of a cream-white or pearl-gray tone; a strangely beautiful tree and one of the most unique of ornamental evergreens. It grows naturally in an attitude of 11,000 feet and is perfectly hardy.

The seed storage house is stocked with seeds of all native American trees and plants, which are shipped in large quantities to all civilized countries. A speciality is made of the long-leaf pine seed for which there is a constant and increasing demand from Italy, France, Japan, and countries of similar latitudes.

tificial hybrid, and a product of Pinehurst. This little bloom has a peculiar and delicate fragrance and large numbers are sent North by visitors.

The Greenhouses are just at the right of the road beyond the "cop bunkers" on the golf course, with the nurseries lying

The Pinehurst Violet.

The speciality of the greenhouse department is the Pinehurst Violet, an arbitrary hybrid, and a product of Pinehurst. This little bloom has a peculiar and delicate fragrance and large numbers are sent North by visitors.

Visitors are always welcome and Mr. Katzenstein takes especial pride and pleasure in showing them about and revealing the various secrets which are hidden from uneducated eyes.
