AGRICULTURAL INSTRUCTION

North Carolina A. and M. College Announces Winter Course.

The popular course for young farmers in the North Carolina A. and M. College, Raleigh, N. C., known as the short course in dairying and agriculture, opens January 4th, 1905 and continues for ten weeks closing March 10th, 1905.

On account of many improvements in the line of work introduced, the work will be far more interesting and important than before. A new course in farm engineering that will be given in connection with the other studies will add much to the importance of the work. This study will embrace rural architecture, and farm machinery, and special stress will be placed upon designing barns, houses, silos, etc.

Another course that will be added is that of Farm Management, which will include a discussion of the management of the farm in various details.

LAST YEARS OUTLOOK.

A Few Complete Volumes are now Available.

A few complete sets of THE PINEHURST OUTLOOK for Volume VII, 1903-04 say a dozen in all, may now be had. Bound the volume forms a complete illustrated history of the season which is a never-failing source of pleasure and satisfaction to the possessor. The price is one dollar, and delay in ordering may mean disappointment.

Many Stop at Washington.

Many of Pinehurst's guests stop over at Washington both going and coming, and The Grafton, Connecticut Avenue, is the favorite hotel. Mr. Mills caters to those who love luxury and comfort combined, at a price which is satisfactory. The hotel is admirably located both from the point of beauty and its nearness to public buildings of interest.

FOR AN IDLE MOMENT.

Find the miller and the "haunt" that frightened him.

A third new course that will be offered will be the cotton course, which will include cotton growing, judging, breeding, and soil management in all of its phases. It is believed that the cotton course will be especially important to the young farmers in our State, and it should receive the attendance of every young cotton farmer that can get away from home during the winter months.

No entrance examination is required in these Winter Courses and no tuition is charged. Practical courses are hereby open to all who desire to better themselves in the various lines of agriculture. The total cost for ten weeks including board, room, light and fuel, etc., is but $30.00. Young men contemplating attending should send in their applications at once to C. W. Burkett, Professor of Agriculture, West Raleigh, N. C., as all students must register in advance to the opening date.

The Bridge Whist Cure.

Bridge has past into a "cure," and is solemnly recommended by certain physicians to patients suffering from neurotics and all other diseases resulting from boredom. Anything which takes people's thoughts off themselves, and prevents their dwelling on their own ailments, must be more or less beneficial, and the cures wrought by bridge in the last year or two are really quite as miraculous as those we read of in the advertisements of patent medicines.

Guests at the Cedars.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Otto, Reading, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Underhill, Winthrop, Mass., Mrs. H. D. Evans, and Master Evans, Mrs. J. D. Currier, and Mr. B. W. Norton, Boston, Mass., comprise the guests at The Cedars, many of who come for long sojourns.
