The Road to Pinehurst.

(With apologies to Mr. Kipling.)

There's a voice that's ever calling,
Calling to this land of snow,
To its ice bound fields and rivers,
From a land I once did know.
Where the summer breezes, blowing,
Touch the flowers with breath of May,
And the golfers swing their drivers
On the giddy Links each day.

Yes, I tell them of that country,
Where tis spring-time all the year;
But they only shrug their shoulders,
Holding fast their frozen ear:
"Can you skate in Pinehurst?" ask they,
"Can you snow-shoe there each day?"
When I answer, "No, thank Heaven,"
Shake their heads and turn away.
What know they of that bright place,
Frozen heart and frosty face.

Put me back in good old Pinehurst,
Where the bad is not the worst;
Where old Kenyon has the needful,
If a man should have a thirst.
For the mocking birds are calling,
And tis there that I would be;
For I loath this wretched winter,
And snow cuts no ice with me.

Oh to be in Pinehurst gay,
Where the golf balls run all day,
And Mc. Nab takes in the money,
And old Donald has his say.
Oh to be in Pinehurst gay,
Where tis summer every day,
And the woods are sweet with flowers,
Down in Pinehurst, far away.

God of the Open Air.

These are the gifts I ask
Of thee, Spirit serene:
Strength for the daily task,
Courage to face the road,

Good cheer to help me bear the traveler's load,
And, for the hours of rest that come between,
An inward joy of all things heard and seen.

These are the sins I fain
Would have thee take away:
Malice, and cold disdain,
Hot anger, sullen hate,

Scorn of the lowly, envy of the great,
And discontent that casts a shadow gray
On all the brightness of the common day.

These are the things I prize
And hold of dearest worth:
Light of the sapphire skies,
Peace of the silent hills,

Shelter of woods and comfort of the grass,
Music of birds, murmur of little rills,
Shadow of clouds that swiftly pass,
And after showers.

The smell of flowers

And of the good brown earth,—
And best of all along the way, friendship and mirth.

—Henry Van Dyke, in Century Magazine.

THE CAROLINA OPENING

Hotel is Entertaining Largest Number of Early Guests in History.

The Great Influx of January Arrivals
Gives Glimpse of Midseason—Old and New Friends Come.

VERY train is bringing its quota of guests for the hotels in the Pinehurst system, and with the magnificent Carolina open and entertaining the largest number of early comers in history, The Holly Inn full nearly to overflowing, The Harvard crowded to its doors, and The Berkshire filling rapidly, one gets a close glimpse of the midseason and it is easy to prophesy another record breaking year for the Village.

The arrivals from now on until Tuesday morning will be exceptionally large for many who are coming to participate in next week's tournaments will be delayed until the last moment, and the last of the coming week will find a number of guests here nearly double that ever recorded at this season.

Smiles wreath the faces of the Northerners who are arriving, for they bring stories of cold and snow which sound unreal in this sunny land; then rejoicing at the change, hie themselves to the telegraph office and wire friends:

"IDEAL PINEHURST WEATHER COME;!"

THE CAROLINA OPENING.

Hotel Opens Monday but few Friends
Already Being Entertained.

The Magnificent Carolina formally opens Monday, but a few friends are already being entertained with accommodations, for Manager Priest had everything well in hand early in the week; a bit ahead of time, after his usual custom. By the end of the week a large company will be assembled here which will include many old and new friends.

Among the distinguished arrivals expected in the course of a few days is Mr. John D. Rockefeller, who comes to renew pleasant associations formed last year.

AT SIGN OF THE HOLLY.

Hotel Filled Very Close to its Capacity
With Congenial Company.

These are merry days at The Holly Inn for a great housefull of guests is assembled who are forming many pleasant acquaintances and planning long sojourns.

EXTEND HEARTY WELCOME

in gala attire. The young ladies who assisted in the dining room made a charming group and with one exception were cousins of the bride. They were Mrs. E. P. MacNichol, Mrs. Harris Eaton, Miss Anna Eaton, Miss Vera Young, the Misses Frances, Sarah and Winnifred Todd, and Miss Emma McCully. The color scheme in the dining room was of red and green. At the close of the reception an elaborate supper was served the wedding party and the young lady assistants.

The wedding presents were very numerous and beautiful. Among the gifts were three handsome vases, one of Rookwood, one of cut glass and another of Japanese, presented by the teachers of the schools in Norwood and Hyde Park, Mass., where Miss Boardman was a most highly successful teacher of art. The bride's gifts to the young ladies who assisted her were souvenirs from abroad. Dr. and Mrs. Hill left on Thursday morning's Washington County express on their wedding trip to the south. They will reside at Marblehead, Mass., on their return.
