

THE CITY OF GREENSBORO

It Possesses Many Attractions for Visitors From the North.

Guilford Revolutionary Battle Ground of Special Interest—Interesting Information.

THE close proximity of Pinehurst to the city of Greensboro, and the fact that visitors here pass through the place both going and coming, causes many to make short visits or stop over either going or coming. The place is one of much interest, being a typical Southern city and the hotel Guilford-Benbow, affords the most satisfactory accommodations.

Greensboro, is situated in the Piedmont section, on the main line of the Southern Railway, claims many advantages as a winter resort for tourists from the north who are, at this time of the year, wending their way southward, and is especially inviting to those who, with the majority, find it wise to break the long journey from the northern states to the extreme warmth of the far south. The climate is temperate and dry; and Greensboro occupies an altitude of 300 feet which is sufficiently high to give it a dry and bracing air in a latitude just far enough south to give a delightful and temperate mildness to the climate.

The County of Guilford, named in honor of Lord North, Earl of Guilford, was formed in 1770, and here was fought, March 15th, 1781, the Battle of Guilford Court House, in which the British troops, under Lord Cornwallis received at the hands of General Nathaniel Greene the turning blow under which it staggered until it surrendered at Yorktown. Greensboro derives its name from General Greene.

The Battle Ground which is about thirty minutes drive from the hotel door, is now marked by many beautiful monuments and long lines of small square marble stones mark the lines of battles. A number of tombs of heroes of those stormy days may be found on this field. An interesting feature not to be overlooked in a visit to this battle field, is the famous Battle Ground Oak which measures seven feet in diameter and which owes its prominence to the fact that Lord Cornwallis's, horse bit the top off of it while a little more than a sprout. Another feature which will repay the visitor his time, is the museum which contains many interesting relics of the Revolution. The United States Congress has recently made an appropriation of $10,000.00 for the erection of a monument to Generals Davidson and Francis Nash, and Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island has introduced a bill in the Senate to erect a memorial shaft to General Greene.

Hotels Guilford and Benbow offer to tourists accommodations the equal of any of the best resort hotels to be found in the south. Both houses are heated with steam and hot water, have passenger elevators, and an intercommunicating telephone system between the bed rooms, nearly all of which are connected with private baths. These are operated on the American and European plans, have their own central plant which furnishes ice, electricity, and heat, and also the laundry for the guests. An electric coach meets all trains at the Union Station which is about two blocks distant from the hotels.

The Grand Opera House is in a circuit which guarantees to Greensboro the best attractions that come South.

The roads leading out from Greensboro are macadamized and go through an attractive rolling country.

VERY SELECT.

The Tenderfoot—I say, Old Chap, is your society select out here?
Bad Bill—It sure is. Why, I killed a dude from the East myself last week who tried to butt into one of our dances without an invite.
