Disguise Party at Carolina One of Season's Most Entertaining Events.

Company Which Taxes Capacity of Music Hall Assembles to Witness It-Cake Walk a Feature.

THE disguise or masquerade party at The Carolina, Saturday evening, was one of the merriest and most picturesque, as well as the most interesting social events of the present season, and the company which assembled to witness it taxed the capacity of the music hall to overflowing, many standing during the entire evening.

While the affair was impromptu in its nature, being arranged on short notice, there were nevertheless, a goodly number of participants and a variety of costumes, nearly all of which were exceedingly effective. Prizes were awarded for the most elaborate, most ludicrous and the best character representation, Mrs. Grace R. Palmer of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., winning the first, Miss Helen Woodworth of Rochester, N. Y., the second, and Mr. R. H. Dana, of Cambridge the third.

Mrs. Palmer's costume was a most elaborate one, her dress being trimmed with a target pistol and target, a tennis racquet and balls, a riding whip and several playing cards.

Miss Woodworth was most ludicrously arrayed, and a long coat worn backwards and the clever arrangement of her hair, made it well-nigh impossible to tell which was the "right side."

Mr. Dana as a French maid, was one of the features of the evening and he kept the company in an uproar of laughter most of the time, and willingly let spectators who wished, and some who did not, hold the "sweet child" which he carried.

Equally as entertaining as Mr. Dana was Mr. J. D. Foot of Rye, N. Y., the distinguished lady (presumably of wealth) upon whom Mr. Dana, as maid, was supposed to dance attendance. Mr. Foot's gown was of green iridescent silk and the "wikins" were in keeping with the character.

Another costume which attracted more than special attention was worn by Mrs. William Dunlap Sargent of Brooklyn, a vivid reproduction of a field scarecrow. The skirt, covered with laths and corn stalks; dirty brown corduroy coat, red bandana handkerchief, half concealing the face, and broad-brimmed army hat, combining with the extended left arm, to make a strangely fantastic picture.

Mr. Herbert W. Cost of St. Louis, and Mr. Everett B. Lockwood of New York, were arrayed as a dusky beau and swain, blackfaced, liquid tongued and otherwise realistic.

Among the many attractive costumes worn by the young women was the "littie girl's" costume worn by Miss Marie sonating a colored lass.

Mr. LeRoy W. Johnson, Mr. T. R. Ward, Jr., Mr. H. Nelson Burroughs, Mr. C. E. Kaltenbach, Mr. E. W. Van Duesen, Mr. B. B. Dessenan, Mr. J. R. Wickwire, Mr. William Dunlap Sargent and Master William Anderson were also in costumes more or less ludicrous, several of them impersonating young women.

Just before unmasking came a cake walk in which several couples participated, Mr. Cost and Mr. Lockwood being declared the winners and receiving the cake, contributed by Mrs. I. B. Johnson of Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y., amid great applause. General dancing filled out the evening.

Miss Constant Johnson of Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y., wore a striking Spanish costume, and Mrs. B. de Mossin of New York, an effective costume of pink with hat to match. Mrs. M. B. Byrnes of New York, wore a shirt waist costume and Miss Irene Houghtaling of New York, a ludicrous looking backward conception. Miss Ethel Check of East Orange, wore a pretty red and white check gown, imper-
