

RALEIGH CHARMING CITY

Becoming Rendezvous More and More for Northern Visitors.

Magnificent Oaks, Pretty Homes, Broad Streets and Points of Interest Conspicuous Features.

SOUTHERN cities of the best type have a peculiar interest for northern visitors, and because of this and its close proximity to Pinehurst, the city of Raleigh is claiming attention from visitors here in increasing numbers each year.

The special feature of Raleigh which will at once impress the visitor, is its wealth of magnificent oaks, pretty homes and broad, clean streets; but a closer acquaintance will attract attention to its schools, libraries and public buildings, for the city is easily the centre of the State and one of the few cities in the South so fully equipped, in this particular.

Among the prominent colleges here is the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, devoted to technical training along these lines, and two colleges for the higher education of the colored race; Shaw University and the St. Augustine Normal School. There are also three colleges for women, St. Mary's College, Peace Institute, and the Baptist University. The University of North Carolina, one of the oldest universities in the United States, is but twenty-eight miles distant from the city.

The libraries are numerous, and prominent among them is the State library containing many thousand volumes of valuable books, manuscripts, and numerous portraits of prominent men. As a reference library and collection of important documents, it is without doubt one of the best in the South, and is frequently consulted by those desiring historic data. The Olivia Raney circulating library is centrally located and well equipped.

The State Museum in the Agricultural Building has a most interesting feature in the department known as the Hall of History. Under the management of Col. F. A. Olds a splendid collection has been gathered together including loan exhibits of heirlooms, valuable relics of revolutionary times and the "old South", rare documents, and the like.

The State institutions include Dix Hill Hospital, for the insane, Institution for the Blind, the State Penitentiary, and the public buildings, the State Capitol, Supreme Court Building, Agricultural Building, and Executive Mansion.

The amusements are varied, including a modern opera house, at which high-class companies are seen during the winter season. A special feature is made of musical productions. The stores are many and will interest the northerner.

The innumerable drives which open up in Raleigh are among its leading attractions, and macadamized roads lead to many points of historic and other interest and give one a glimpse of the quaint colonial houses in the suburbs and their vine-covered porches, as well as bits of negro life which can be found in huts of the suburbs.

Exceptionally fortunate is Raleigh in its hotel accommodations and northerners who have their ideas of southern hotels firmly fixed by many and painful experiences, will find the New Yarborough hotel a revelation. Landlord Howell Cobb has furnished the house with intelligence born of long years of experience with the very best class of people, and with this he has combined a sense of the artistic and the fitness of things which produces a most delightful impression. In addition to the large office, comfortable public rooms, there are numerous elegantly furnished suits with bath, and delightful private dining rooms.

For some time past the hotel has been a rendezvous for numerous parties from Pinehurst who desired to enjoy an evening at the theatre, a special dinner, or a change of scene, and many travellers are stopping over here on their way to and from the south.

Manager Cobb has also leased the New Park Hotel, and he looks forward to making Raleigh quite a winter resort centre owing to its moderate climate which is compared with that of Rome, Southern California, Mexico, Spain and Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. Tufts Return Home.

Mr. and Mrs. William Fuller Tufts of Brookline, Mass., left for home during the week after a six weeks' sojourn here. Mr. and Mrs. Tufts are loved by all who know them because of their genial courtesy and kindly interest, and their departure is the cause for sincere regret among many friends and acquaintances.
