THEY TEST SIMPLE LIFE

Beau Brummells at Lenox Perpetrate Novel Joke on Unsuspecting Friends.

Joyous Moment Comes When They Sit in Characteristic Country-Side Rig and are Photographed.

THE guests at The Lenox find something to entertain them most of the time and when there comes anything like an approach of lethargy there is a sudden awakening.

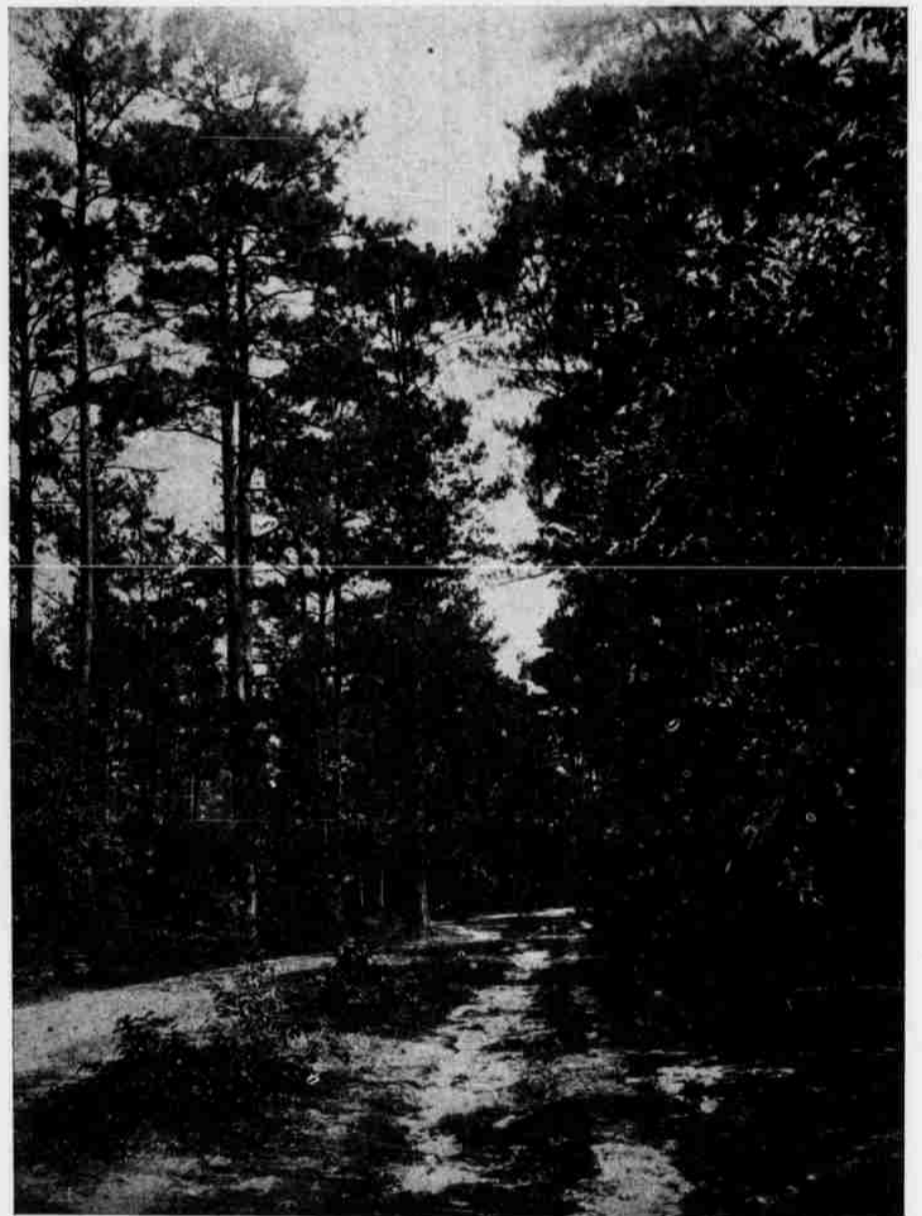

One of the recent novelties was the appearance at the noon hour, of two of the social Beau Brummells of the house, Mr. Arthur M. Allen of West Newton, ride home, a gleeful acceptance came.

The only conveyance on the place was a "single wagon" and the steed was the "family mule," the "critter" which does odd jobs in this section much as the family mare does in Kentucky, but hardly as well. Much scurrying was necessary before harness, and rope, and wire enough to keep mule and wagon together could be secured. Chain from an old plow furnished tugs, rope of several kinds, reins, and a seat was found in the shape of a board which formerly had splinters on both sides, but which is now said to be quite smooth.

The trip in was without incident except speculation on the part of the young men as to how long the splinters or their trousers would hold out, but the absence of springs on the wagon made it possible, in the rough places, for them to keep their minds off themselves, and incidentally, their trousers off the boards.

But all this was forgotten in the joy of the moment when they sat

Mass., and Mr. G. R. Wallace of Brooklyn, driving a rig characteristic of those used by the natives of the country-side.

Ever on the lookout for something in the way of a new experience, the young men in question, have recently taken to the country-side for walks and drives, and incidentally, during these trips, have made many friends among the residents. Open hearted hospitality has always greeted them, and numerous invitations to dine on the "snack," or eat-as-you-go plan, have been declined, but when one of the exponents of the "simple life" offered the loan of a team in which to
