From start to finish the event was a success, with good fellowship as its character feature, and while the attendance was hardly what the committee expected, the members are well satisfied with the result as a whole and feel that it augurs well for the future.

As golf tournaments pure and simple, these annual gatherings must not be judged wholly, but rather as "frolics to promote good fellowship," as President Presbrey so aptly expressed it, and this was well illustrated at the annual banquet which ranks as one of the most brilliant affairs of the kind ever seen here.

Pinehurst is glad to have entertained the "A. G. A. of A. I.," and will anticipate its return with pleasure.

Here's to its future prosperity!

ARE IN PROGRESS TODAY.

er. Wonderfully beautiful days such as represent the very best portion of October in New England, where the rule, and there was life in the air and glory in the sunshine. Hundreds of onlookers thronged the Country Club House and the course, daily, crowding around the bulletin boards eagerly as the scores were posted, or applauding the players as they started or finished.

News of close matches spread like wildfire and the appearance of a couple on the first tee to decide a close match by extra holes, was the signal for the crowd to flock to the course, like a city crowd to a ball game.

ENTERTAINMENT FEATURES.

Various entertainment features contributed much to the pleasure of the visitors, conspicuous among which were Wednesday evening's banquet at The Carolina and the evening of wax works, advertising tableaux and living pictures at the Village Hall, Thursday. There were also dances at The Carolina and Holly Inn each evening, afternoon teas at the Country Club House daily, and numerous informal private affairs, in the way of dinners, bridge parties, and the like.

The golfers leave not only with the satisfaction of having participated in the most important tournament ever held in the south, but with delightful recollections of Pinehurst in general which will make them anticipate return visits with pleasure.
