Handicraft Shop Opening Provides Evening of Rare Enjoyment.

Arts and Crafts Creations from Many Lands Replete with Interest and Fascination.

ALWAYS enjoyable, always anticipated, are the annual openings of the Handicraft Shop, now looked forward to from year to year as the first of the season's more formal affairs, and none has provided a more delightful evening than Monday's gathering which drew together the entire Village. A cosmopolitan throng it was for art belongs to the world, and in the enjoyment of it, all touch elbows and exchange greetings, breaking through the lives which at other times, divide the various walks of life, which though running side by side, are often far apart; the recollection one of an evening happily spent.

Of never ending fascination has been the Shop, but rearrangement and additional novelties have, this season, made it even more charming than heretofore, the arrangement calculated to suggest more fully than in the past just what a wealth of things of rare interest the place contains.

To be sure one finds old friends in the native rugs and novelties, with a stock more complete; rugs of light and heavy weave, rugs for "cabins" and "bungalows," rugs of simple and elaborate design, all rich in soft colors, all woven on the hand loom which is not in the literal sense, a "machine"; their texture like the brush marks upon a painting, showing the individuality of their creators. There are also the same Russian toys of carved wood, the jumping-jack bears, mechanical peacocks, horses, cows, dogs and the like which bob their heads and wag their tails alternately, not only to the delight of the little ones but older folks as well, with many things new and equally amusing.

There are puzzle boxes and puzzle eggs of unique construction, and not only jigsaw puzzles, but special boards to hold them, so that they may be transported to places of safety without fear of disturbance until the problem is solved. There are colored dolls, realistically garbed, and miniature furniture perfect in form, finish and color which is a joy to the collector, and (it is really useless to try and tell) no end of things which will send the children into ecstasies of delight.

Wondrously popular among grown-ups are bamboo baskets of varied design, done in soft rich red-brown, and baskets of sweet grass, wire grass and reeds, representing not only native workers, but the Indians and many others.

Brass and copper creations add a refreshing note of color and line, Russian lace in large variety, fascinates, there are exquisite picture frames in antique lacquer effect, dainty embroidery and native ness has been added to by a bright frieze of red and green drapery and the use of Christmas greens and pine boughs. Until the season closes it will, as in the past, be the show place of the Village.

Manager and Mrs. George F. Fosdick were assisted in receiving by their daughter, Mrs. Martha L. Stephens, Miss Mayme Casey, Miss Florence B. Campen, Miss Fannie Gray, Mrs. A. M. Swinerton and Mrs. John Peacock. During the evening music was furnished by The Holly Inn orchestra, and punch was woodwork, and souvenirs without number; in fact every nook and corner of the big room and the shelves about it, is laden with things which make the visit one of delight. As in the past homemade candy will be a special feature and plans are being made for native rug weaving, always interesting to visitors. At no season of the year does the Shop appeal more than during these weeks when thoughts go out to loved ones at home, and its customary attractive-served in the rear room; a souvenir being given to each guest.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cummings.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln C. Cummings of the Mistletoe, entertained pleasantly in honor of their sixteenth wedding anniversary with a dinner at The Holly Inn during the week, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Tufts, Miss Cummings and Mr. C. T. Dunham.

JOHN R. GOODALL WINNER

Leads Big Field by Narrow Margin in Medal Play Handicap.

Thirty-three Contestants and Keen Scores Rule. Ninety-five Marking Limit.

SATURDAY'S medal play golf handicap attracted a field of thirty-three contestants, John R.
