TEAM MATCH DEAD HEAT

Forty and One-half Each Is Score For Twenty-seven Couples

Contest Proves Its Popularity As Special and Permanent Feature
Of Annual Program

THE ANNUAL team match of the Tin Whistles which preceded the dinner, was a "dead heat," teams A and B numbering twenty-seven couples, both scoring forty and one-half points on the three point system; one going out, one coming in and one for the match. The "gentle rain," of the afternoon made it necessary to approximate a few of the matches; but the contest, nevertheless, proved very conclusively its popularity as a special and permanent feature of the annual program. The scores:

TEAM A	POINTS	TEAM B
Donald Ross	2-1	Alex Ross
G. H. Crocker	1-2	W. C. Fownes, Jr.

G. H. CROCKER THE WINNER

the seventeenth to tie, but could do no better than a halve on the eighteenth and lost the nineteenth, 5-6. The medal scores were seventy-nine and eighty, and they included twos for Col. Smith on the third and sixth, and for Mr. Lard on the eighth. Mr. Scammell won the right to play Mr. Lard in the second round through a keen match with C. L. Becker of Woodland. One down at the turn, Mr. Scammell lost the tenth, halved the twelfth, gained the lead again on the thirteenth and maintained it with halves on the next three holes. Mr. Becker, however, rallied on the short seventeenth and, all even, Mr. Scammell captured the eighteenth, 5-6. His round with Mr. Lard was equally keen, and his victory the surprise of the week.

In the consolation Mr. Fownes upheld the reputation of America's foremost golfing family, winning easily from George F. Brown of the Huntingdon Valley Country club, four up and three to play; the match ending at noon. In the semi-final, W. H. Thayer of Crow Point, was the victim three and one, while Mr. Brown and Col. Smith got to going so fast that they overran the home green. The Philadelphian was two holes to the good at the turn, but at the fifteenth, the match was all square. Col. Smith gained the lead on the long sixteenth to lose it on the short seventeenth; the eighteenth was halved and the nineteenth Mr. Brown's in 5-6. In the first round Col. Smith and Mr. Becker found plenty to keep them occupied, the last hole deciding it.

In the remaining nine divisions eighteen-hole finals prevailed, and there were trophies for the division winners and runners up and the consolation division winners, the twenty-seven who captured trophies including; Robert Hunter of Wee Burn, C. B. Whitney of Springfield and Fillemore K. Robeson of Oak Hill, in the second; E. A. Johnston of Baltimore, H. W. Ormsbee of Alpine and W. H. Doughton of Merion, in the third; J. W. Thompson of Springhaven, W. L. Hurd of Oakmont and C. M. Jamison of Greensburg, in the fourth; George Van Kurven of Englewood, W. F. Lewis of Kenilworth and J. S. McCormick of Oakmont, in the fifth; Edward Davis of Philadelphia, C. B. Price of Salem and G. T. Dunlap of Forest Hill, in the sixth; Dr. T. Howard Knight of Philadelphia, W. H. Nevins of Springhaven and D. C. Ogden of Greensburg, in the seventh; G. C. Bassett of Overbrook, C. J. Wilson of Dyker Meadow, and Lewis Brown of Oakmont, in the eighth; E. M. Knowles of Kenilworth, T. J. Palmer of Arcola, and F. C. Johnson of Nassau, in the ninth; L. B. Miller of Euclid, W. T. Stall of Brockton and J. W. Lloyd of Pittsburg, in the tenth. In the special consolation provided for the overflow, in itself a tournament of considerable size, J. P. Gardner of Midlothian, R. W. Wistar of Lansdown and John McGoey of Wykagyl, were the winners.

The tournament demonstrated very conclusively that there is evidently no limit to its entrance and that the time is not far distant when the list will pass the three hundred mark, making qualification on two or three distinct courses necessary; a condition of affairs which would not be possible elsewhere in the world.

Full qualification scores and match play summary are printed upon pages four and five of this issue and the story of the consolation event on page nine.

The annual Club Championship tournament concludes today, and the United North and South Amateur Championship starts next week with the women's event.

Guests of Mr. Thompson

One of the jolliest dinner parties of the week at The Inn was given by Mr. J. M. Thompson in honor of his first victory in the "golfing world"; the central table design being his trophy, a silver cup, surrounded by American beauty roses. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Goodwin, Mrs. James L. Pedern, Mrs. J. M. Thompson, Miss Bernadette Herman and Mr. Franklin Pierce Lee.
