HE YIELDS TO THE SUMMONS

Timid Deer Hears "Call of the Wild" and Diversified Trouble Ensues

SNUGLY ensconced in the Deer Park, the King of the little herd appears one of the most dignified, serene and docile of animals, but ever and always his sub-conscious self is listening for the "Call of the Wild." Recently the summons came when a tall pine crashed down upon the fence and opened up an avenue of escape. Tip-toeing gently the King moved forward into The Unknown and for experiences varied and diversified. Naturally the presence of Mankind in the Great Beyond was annoying, for in his heart of hearts, he felt that the Wilderness and its Solitude awaited him.

First to greet him was a lad on his way to the Country Club. With a boy's curiosity he said "good morning," and he made the staircase of the Club house just a hair's breadth ahead of the Monarch. Returning through the Grove the King encountered a young woman who arriving on an early morning train, was Communing with Nature and who also wished to be friendly. When she tried to recall just what happened she was inside the Railroad Station, Communing with the Agent!

Swinging to the right, the shrubbery at the rear of The Carolina proved most toothsome and yielding to a natural desire, the King refreshed himself upon the tender shoots. An under cook, however, thought the pruning season was over and approached the timid animal cautiously, lest he startle him too much in driving him away; but the result was a mad dash back to pots and cooking with new understanding of the Seaton-Thompson tales. Then Isiaah Short, a colored lad whose build suggests his name, came past, whistling merrily. Recognizing the King, afar from native haunts, he affectionately threw an arm around his neck and started to lead him back to the Park. Isiaah has not yet fully recovered his command of language, but the program included an Odd Fellow's grip, a good old fashioned Masonic initiation, and a Turkey Trot on his waistcoat, which was interrupted by the appearance of two workmen who had a more intimate acquaintance with the gentle beast.

Securing a couple of ten-foot lengths of gas pipe they started in with demonstrative argument which stilled the King's longing and resulted in his complete submission. You may see him today behind the wire of the Deer Park, the most dignified, serene and docile of animals; but ever and always his sub-conscious self is listening for the "Call of the Wild." The next time he hears it 'phone for the men with the gas pipe!
