OFFICERS ON FURIOUGH

Add Martial Aspect to Incoming Holiday Guests at the Carolina

During Holiday week the leaning motif of the Carolina after tea time has been innumerable dinner parties—celebrations so universal that no man might dare to distinguish between formal functions invited guests and the casual diner. The girls are now out in full war paint, and the ball room hums with the sound of the fiddles and the roll of the drum, the patter of slippers and the whispers and laughter. The mornings are dedicated to the stern realities of bandages and the mammoth tasks of the Red Cross, under whose aegis all the women are mobilized. Wiley-Pope Swifts orchestra comes in for its mede of praise, particularly for its concerts Sunday evenings, when its rendering of Gounod and Tschaiowski brought forth great applause from the connoisseurs.

To those of us who have lingered here for years the house is assuming the aspect of a club—so many and so familiar are the cronies coming in to their accustomed places. Here are Mr. and Mrs. Fayen back again from Montclair; Mrs. S. H. Patterson and Miss Louise from Plainfield, J. M. Thompson, a leader on the links, and M. Lane Verlenden, of the old guard, from Darby, Connecticut. For a day or two while their passes held good the scene was rendered picturesque and martial by the presence of officers in their service kahki, including Captain C. H. Angell from Camp Jackson, and Captain Chapin Marcus from Camp Lee, John T. Small joined the holiday throng, come for his annual visit, and many others make up the roll, including

Another One

Wild with envy upon reading the account of the wonderful performance of Von Cannon the banker, in shooting number six on Course 2 with one well placed mashie shot, as exclusively depicted last week in that enterprising journal the Pinehurst Outlook, W. M. Crooks gathered him in a spoon and a cloud of witnesses, to wit, R. C. Shannon II, Carl Reimer and J. M. Thompson, and fared out to show that there was nothing unique about it. He put the ball upon the tee. He appraised the distance with a discriminating eye. And as easily as you or I sink a three inch putt when we are lucky he dropped the astonished pill into the hole.

The Rifle Club

has come into its own. The Pinehurst range, now fully finished for regulation U. S. army target practice up to 400 yards, is being used once a week by the North Carolina Militia training with the Crag rifles. The old members of the rifle club are for the most part members of this new Home Guard.
