Coincides With the Fair

THE GOVERNOR and Mrs. Bickett of North Carolina arrived; the head waiter took imperious and gracious command; the band struck up. The big dining room was thrown open and Jock Bowker's refrain rang once again through the corridors. From which it was manifest that the Carolina Hotel was open indeed, in theory as well as in fact, formally and majestically setting out upon its auspicious way towards another season under the sun.

SEEN AT THE FAIR

tels. They say the word and people spring up from nowhere and everywhere to partake of the feast. Yesterday a small and merry party of pioneers held informal luncheon in the anteroom. Tonight the doors of the big dining room are thrown majestically open, and lo! the room is filled. They say so many people by half never sat down at an opening of the hostelry.

The moment was well chosen or well happened. The 20th was also the opening of the Sandhill Fair and the Berkshire Hog Congress. And mingling with the veteran golfers and old stagers taking their accustomed places, were the pretty Scotch girls from Flora Macdonald College, come to frolic, and the sturdy legion of husbandmen, mobilized to help save a starving world and incidentally to glorify the dish-faced pig.

Among the old acquaintances were welcomed Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Nicholson of New Bedford, challengers of the links; Dr. and Mrs. Vardell, our helpful neighbors from Red Springs; S. T. Nash and H. W. Coming, of Cleveland, Ohio, who were the first to bring in a string of a dozen birds from the
