ANNIE OAKLEY GIVES EXHIBITION

longer you stay at the game, you will make the wonderful discovery that the "bad half-hours" slip in very frequently.

The missing of one or more targets in an event, every so often, is what makes trapshooting so interesting and one of the most difficult games to master. If you could get so proficient that you could break them all, all the time, you would soon lose all interest in the sport; but the fact that men like Hawkins, Taylor, Spencer, Crosby, Gilbert, and a host of other of our top-notchers who have shot thousands of targets, frequently have their "bad-hours," demonstrates that breaking targets thrown from a trap, with a shotgun, is a study which requires a great deal of practice and patience and no small amount of skill.
