GIRLS ARE GOING TO WEAR 'EM

It Will be a Hard Matter Now to Tell Ma from Pa on the Links

Should you happen to be in the South this winter it may save you a lot of embarrassment if on going out of a morning and noting the slow couple ahead in tweeds and knickers you take a second glance down the course before yielding to the temptation to send a ball hurtling after them. Things are not always what they seem. That couple clattering up the field and ruining your game because of the waits entailed may look exactly like the pair who sat in and took away all the luck in the poker game the night before, but there is also a chance that they are only a couple of members of the women's "knickerbocker golf club" out for a round.

In an age where anything is possible it may not be surprising to find that there are women golfers brave enough to vote for the banishment of the skirt. The new club has come into being in Washington, D. C., and, as it only requires a start in such matters, very likely it will not be long before the fair ones in the—ahem!—skirtless suits are found scattered all over the South. Whether the fashion will spread to the Northern playing fields by another season is just one of those grand things that make a future rosy and worth while.

That the fair devotees of the cleek have not donned the new apparel merely for the sake of making themselves conspicuous they demonstrated last Sunday when they held a tournament over the links of the Bannockburn Golf Club. There were eight starters, all arrayed according to the constitution and by-laws, and while eight may not seem to be a large number, there is no telling how big the field might have been had the tailor been able to outfit in time for the founders' tourney all who have taken out membership cards.

The girls are not wearing them either to attract any notoriety or make a show of themselves. They are more modest than skirts that blow ever which way, the fair golfers claim, and in this they are right and are entitled to their freedom.—Southern Golfer.
