TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETICS

Track and field athletics will have the greatest season of history this summer.

The Penn relays, the "intercollegiates" and the "nationals," the three classics of the American track, will be conducted on the most elaborate lines.

The Penn relays will be almost a miniature Olympics, with a strong international flavor lent by the presence of English and French college teams. The games will be much more representative nationally, also, as many institutions, especially the United States Naval Academy, will be represented for the first time.

The appearance of the French team promises to create as much interest and real competition as the English team that came over last spring and broke a world's relay team record.

Andre, a hurdles, high jumper and runner, perhaps will be the most noted member of the French team. He competed at the Olympic games and proved himself one of the most versatile performers in the field.

Intercollegiate competition will be augmented this year by the first national intercollegiate meet which is to be held after the eastern intercollegiate and western conference and the various other sectional meets.

The "national intercollegiates" is the idea of the University of Chicago which will stage the event on June 11. It is planned to have represented the eastern colleges, the Southern Conference, Missouri Valley, Rocky Mountain, Pacific Coast, Western and other conferences.

The national championships likewise will be conducted on more extensive lines. Los Angeles will stage the meet early in July. The date is a departure from the usual custom of holding the meet late in the summer. Robert S. Weaver, president of the A. A. U., was instrumental in having an early summer time set in order to permit college athletes to compete before they have broken training.

CARD OF APPRECIATION

The committee of ladies having in charge the Card Party for the benefit of the Pinehurst Chapel wish to express their gratitude to all those in Pinehurst and nearby villages who helped so generously and willingly by their contributions of money and prizes towards the success of the good work, which went far beyond our expectations, having reached the round sum of eight hundred dollars.

F. A. SEIBERT HIGH GUN AT THE TRAPS

F. A. Seibert of New York was high gun in the weekly 100-target tournament at the Gun Club and led the field with 93-6-99. H. T. Whitten of Boston and T. C. Adams, Boston, tied, at 87-10-97 for second place.

GOLF

VERDANT GREENE

Lady Forbes Robertson, nee Gertrude Elliott, is appearing in England in golf play, or to put it in other words, in an amusing but improbable drama in which the royal and ancient furnishes the mainspring of the plot. Here is the tangle: Mrs. Samuel Dennison is a victim of golf. Sam plays it every day, Sundays included and practices putting at night in wife's bedroom. Her maid has an idea. Why should not Madame advertise as a lonely lady for a lonely gentleman? Innocent Madame does. Lonely gentleman is at first polite, but finally locks the door and threatens to misbehave. Madame, affrighted, summons her husband by telephone and lonely gentleman decamps with madame's pearl necklace. Madame returns home, cured of her taste for adventure, only to find the lonely gentleman there. He is an actor and friend of her husband, who, having discovered madame's little plan in advance had sent the player to give her a lesson. Husband, however, has learned his, too, and resolves to give up golf. Curtain.

As showing how rapidly a golf club can grow here are the exact figures, last season, of suburban club with nine holes, near New York: "Incorporated February 28th, 1920, it had 54 active members and 27 associates March 5, and on May 1, the limit of 75 active members was reached with 44 associates. On May 28 the active limit was raised to 85, but at the annual meeting it was voted to raise the boundary to 125." At that, the fees on both classes were advanced sharply within eight months of the date that the start was made, and it was voted to spend $8,000. in improving the course, although 2500-yard stretches are looked upon askance now-a-days.

Charter members of clubs have long had the habit of getting in on the ground floor, but it remained for a Long Island organization to jump membership charges in blocks of 25, by regular graduation. In that way, public attention is focussed, but in exactly the reverse style from store sales in which the prices of articles remaining are automatically reduced overnight. As the scheme has not yet been drawn to a conclusion, it is hard to say just how it will work out.
