gan of Chicago, 2 up, in the final round. During his college days at Harvard Eagan was one of the top-notch golfers, and in his match with Redfield he showed flashes of his old-time form, but was unable to withstand the rush of his youthful opponent and lost the match on the seventeenth green. Eagan was out in 40 and made the turn 1 up. Redfield squared the match on the twelfth, won the fourteenth but lost the fifteenth and was all even again. The sixteenth was the deciding point of the match. Eagan was near the green on his second, while Redfield was behind him in 4, but took 3 more to get down while his opponent holed a brilliant putt for a win in 5. Both players were trapped at the seventeenth but Redfield came out and holed a six-foot putt for a 3 which won him the match and the trophy.

J. M. Haddon of Wykagyl, won the third division trophy from I. Hellman, Fairview, by default, while the consolation prize in that division went to J. C. Bowen, Buffalo, by virtue of a 6 and 5 victory over E. S. Parson, Providence.
