Cafe des Invalides

(Compounded)

This compound is not all coffee, but contains about seven eighths coffee, of the finest grades, blended with vegetable substances, which have been found to render it more healthful than pure coffee, in that it does not produce nervousness or wakefulness.

"CAFE DES INVALIDES" does not produce the usual effects.

Yet "CAFE DES INVALIDES" pleases the most critical coffee connoisseurs.

Some Sandhill History

an expedition to probe the raging McDeed's creek around the bridge at the site of the old Yadkin ford, and brethren, what a find it would be if we might dig up those ancient pieces of artillery that the British dragged up from Charleston perhaps to Camden, then to Guilford Courthouse, and then abandoned on the burdensome retreat to Wilmington after his campaign into the interior of the Carolinas proved a failure to the British aspirations, and the practical guarantee of the success of the new government in the colonies.

I would not like to lay too much encouragement on finding those guns, but I know that while the men were doing the excavation on the golf links at the Mid-Pines golf course one of them unearthed a Spanish piece of money that he uncovered from beneath a considerable depth below the surface, and under considerable vegetation that had overgrown the whole vicinity. That coin was from away back in the century that saw the war of revolution fought, and it shows that somebody was around that country a long time ago. If you can find Spanish pieces of eight under ground at Mid-Pines a man might be justified in taking up with the sport of hunting for bigger game in the shape of cannon down at the creek, for the creek is only a short walk from the golf grounds, and it stands to reason that when Cornwallis had dragged those guns that far on his way back to Wilmington he would realize that if he could not do anything with them up at Guilford he could not do a great deal more where he was going next. Then it is cheaper to go to the quartermaster's headquarters and get other guns than to struggle all the way from here to Wilmington through the sand with those that could not chase the continental soldiers away up at Guilford. Probably the guns are there. Certainly the mulberry tree where Cornwallis tied his horse at Carthage as his command stopped there over night was there until a storm a few years ago blowed it down. And certainly no wind could blow down a gun that is already down. So why not an expedition to hunt up those lost guns over on the Midland road at McDeed's creek?
