

JAMES OCKENDEN Approaching the Tee to Slam Out One of His Customary Long Drives.

Then they battled along on even terms for three holes, halving in par figures. Then came the fifteenth and Havers holed his chip shot for a two from twenty-five yards off the sand, and the British pair held to this lead to the end, the remaining holes being halved in par.

It was a splendid victory for the British champion and his partner. They never saw a sand green until Saturday or drove off dirt tees, or played their irons off Bermuda grass. Ross and Capello have had years of experience with Pinehurst golf. When they jumped out in front with a five hole lead it looked as if they would walk in, but the Britishers stuck to the job and pulled the match out.

CAPELLO PLAYS WELL

Capello, brilliant youthful Bangor professional, was responsible for most of the Englishmen's troubles in the morning round. He played a 71 for his own ball, and as Ross aided him on two holes the Pinehurst pair had a best ball of 68 against a 69 for the Britishers. Havers and Ockenden took 37 to go out, but were home in 32 and but one down at the luncheon hour. Havers missed three tee shots in the morning and was in a number of traps. His individual score was 76.

The British champion improved greatly in the second half of the game. He had an individual card of 39—34—73. Ockenden helped him on the eighth and seventeenth.

Havers proved to be the longest hitter of the four players. While the hard dirt tees troubled him somewhat, he usually caught hold of the ball well and got some tremendous carries. His two at the fifteenth was duplicated by Capello, who holed from off the edge of the sand, to obtain a half at the thirteenth, during the afternoon. Havers pleased the gallery when he played an explosion shot from a deep trap at the fourteenth, close to the hole, and got his par four.

The British champion convinced the caustic critics who gather here of his ability. They were especially impressed by his well controlled swing and the drive he gets into it. On account of being unfamiliar with the rolls about the sand greens both Havers and Ockenden were not as bold in playing for the greens as they might have been, and this left them often in need of good chips to obtain their pars. They putted well.

The cards:

MORNING ROUND

ROSS AND CAPELLO

Out	.....4	3	4	4	3	3	3	4	4—32
In	.....4	4	5	4	4	3	4	4	5—37—68

HAVERS AND OCKENDEN

Out	.....4	4	5	4	3	4	4	4	5—37
In	.....4	3	4	3	3	4	2	5	4—32—69

AFTERNOON ROUND

ROSS AND CAPELLO

Out	.....4	5	3	4	5	4	3	5	4—37
In	.....4	5	4	4	4	3	4	3	4—35—72—140

HAVERS AND OCKENDEN

Out	.....4	5	4	3	4	5	3	4	5—37
In	.....4	4	4	4	4	2	4	3	4—33—70—139

Harvard Crimson vs. Sandhill Green

THE HARVARD POLO TEAM, under the management of Capt. S. F. Clark and comprised of George E. Kent, G. J. Farelley, James W. Tufts and John Pell, made a visit to Pinehurst during the Christmas holidays for a series of games with the Sandhill Greens, and were well rewarded for their visit by winning two games out of three.

The first game played resulted in an overwhelming victory for the local team, 10 goals to 1, and the prospects of the crimson four mastering their hosts seemed gloomy, but they soon regained their good riding and stick tactics and with the assistance of John A. Tuckerman, a Harvard graduate but now a member of Pinehurst's Winter colony and a star player of the Sandhill's first team, they romped away with the second game by 10 goals to 0.

In the third game, the students confined themselves to their own players and again scored a decisive victory over the Greens, 9 goals to 3. James W. Tufts, who played number 3 position for Harvard, was a tower of strength to his team in this game and scored six of the nine goals and was indirectly responsible for some of the others. Kent and Captain Cowgill collided in the fifth chukka in which Kent's pony went down and the player sustained a hard fall but he remounted and finished the game. Both players escaped with nothing more serious than a severe shaking up. John W. Latting scored two of the Sandhills goals and Capt. Cowgill scored the third. Both teams played without handicap.

A notable foursome snapped at the home tee of the Mid-Pines course. They are, left to right: S. B. Chapin, New York; Homer H. Johnson, Cleveland; John Bassett Moore, the Hague, and J. F. McGuire, of Boston.