ESC Seeks 70 Youths For Counselors

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Manager Dwight M. Leonard of the State Employment Office reported here today that the Employment Security Commission has openings for over 70 youth employment counselors, counselor trainees and interviewers.

He said the state agency intends to hire persons to act as special advisors to unemployed and disadvantaged young people, and counselor positions will be available in almost every local Employment Security Commission office.

Since there is a shortage of qualified counselors, the ESC has established a training program for college graduates interested in vocational guidance. Applicants must have earned at least nine semester hours in courses relating to counseling. Those accepted as counselor trainees will begin at $5,400 a year and will receive additional academic and on-the-job training before promotion to employment counselors. Persons with a master's degree in guidance or counseling may apply for regular employment counselor positions starting at $6,000 a year.

Leonard said that applicants need no experience to apply for jobs. Examinations will be given each week at various points about the state, and applications are available at the local ESC office located at 945 Park Avenue in Roanoke Rapids.
