Children's Column.

ROCKINGHAM. Dear Editor.—I am a boy 15 years old. I go to school, and study history, literature, spelling, grammar, Latin and arithmetic. My teacher is Prof. Armistead. We all like him so much. I have got a rooster which is blind in one eye and has a mean black look in the other. As this is the first time I have contributed to the children's column, I will close. Black Cat.

ELRON, N. C. Dear Editor.—It is with great pleasure I come into your column once more. Grandpa and grandma spent Xmas with us and you bet we had a grand time. Old Santa Claus came to see my little sister Bessie and myself and brought us lots of good things. I hope he came to see all of the children for I should have been greatly disappointed had he not come to see us. I will close by asking a question. What was the first current money spent for? Irene Poole.

LEOD, N. C. Dear Headlight.—As I have never written a letter to the children's column, I will try to write one.

Grandma and grandpa spent X-mas with us with us. We had a nice time. That was my birthday and Old Santa Claus brought me lots of good things. I was eight years old. Grandma and grandpa brought me some nice toys. My aunt gave me a nice doll for a birthday gift, that will shut its eyes. Hoping to see my letter in print, I will close for this time. Success to the Headlight. Bessie Lee Poole.

A Physician Testifies.

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician, George W. Sorogus, of Hall County, Ga. "Being a physician, I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach, it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by digesting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. Richmond Drug Company.

ADULTERATED COFFEE.

GROVER WHITE FOUND GUILTY OF VIOLATING OHIO'S PURE FOOD LAW.

Interesting Facts Concerning the Hoaxing of Coffee Brought Out by Scientific Experiments—Presence of Bacteria.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 3.—The jury in Judge Meek's court in this city has found James White, a local grocer, guilty of selling adulterated coffee. The prosecution was based on a package of Arbuckle's Ariosa coffee.

The State of Ohio, through the Pure Food Commissioner, prosecuted White. The case was on trial for nearly a month and attracted national attention.

The manufacturers of Ariosa coffee conducted the defense for Grover White. The best attorneys in the country were retained to defend him, but, after a short consultation, a verdict of guilty was returned by the jury. The State of Ohio considers this a big victory. Pure Food Commissioner Blackburn has been waging a warfare on spurious food articles and the department has been successful.

The complaint of the State of Ohio was that Ariosa coffee was coated with a substance which concealed defects in the coffee and made it appear better than it is. The State charged this coating or glazing was a favorable medium for the propagation of bacteria.

Prof. G. A. Kirchmeyer, of this city, a well known chemist, was the principal witness for the State. He had made scientific examinations of samples of Ariosa purchased from Grover White in the open market. He found that each Ariosa berry contained an average of 300 bacteria. Mr. Kirchmeyer further testified that other coffees he examined contained few bacteria or none at all. He declared that the glazed coffee was not a wholesome food product.

Chemist Schmidt, of Cincinnati, corroborated the testimony of Prof. Kirchmeyer. The State did not present further testimony.

The defense through the Arbuckle, who prepared this glazed coffee, secured some of the most eminent chemists and scientists in the United States to give testimony in their behalf. Prof. H. W. Wiley, of the United States Agricultural Department; Prof. Vaughn of Ann Arbor University; Prof. Idelle and Webster, of the Ohio State University, were called to defend Ariosa. Dr. Wiley had made a careful examination of the method of manufacturing Ariosa. He told of the 10,000,000 eggs used by the Arbuckles yearly in the preparation of this glazing. On this point in cross examination, the State's attorney deftly drew from him the information that these eggs might be kept in cold storage by the Arbuckles for a year or two at a time.

The experts who heard Dr. Wiley's testimony were pleased to be able to "catch" so famous a chemist. The doctor at one point in his testimony explained very clearly how it is that the egg put into the coffee pot by the housewife taints the coffee. He said that the heat coagulates the egg, and as it sinks to the bottom of the pot it carries the fine particles of coffee with it, and thus clarifies the drink. It is the act of coagulation in the coffee pot that does the work. Later on in his cross examination, he had to admit that when the egg was put on Ariosa coffee at the factory it became coagulated, and as egg cannot be coagulated but once, that the coating on coffee was practically no value, as a "settler" when it reached the coffee pot.

Prof. Wiley acknowledged that the glazing might be a favorable medium for the propagation of bacteria, although he would not testify positively either way because he was not a bacteriologist.

Prof. Vaughn, of Ann Arbor, also a witness for the Arbuckles, said he found bacteria on Ariosa coffee.

Prof. Idelle, another witness for the defense, found any number of lively bacteria on Ariosa coffee he examined, and he agreed that glazed coffee surely was a more favorable medium for the propagation of bacteria than unglazed coffee.

Pure Food Commissioner Blackburn said: "The State is very much elated over its victory against this corporation. We are now considering the advisability of informing every grocer in the State of Ohio that it is an infraction of the laws to sell Ariosa, and at the same time give warning to consumers that the coffee is an adulterated food article."

The verdict of the jury in this case is of national importance because a great many other States have pure food laws like that of Ohio, and it is natural to suppose that similar action will be taken by other Pure Food Commissioners to prevent the sale of glazed coffee.

Washington's Fastidious Kinsman. Lawrence, Earl of Ferrers, a distant relative of George Washington, had a most tyrannical temper, and one day in a fit of passion he cut down with his sword his steward, an old gentleman named Johnson. The latter had given no provocation for the deed, and the crime was an act of brutality inexcusable save that the Earl may not have been well balanced mentally. He was brought to trial for killing Johnson and demanded and received the privilege of being tried by his peers.

The house of lords was thronged during the hearing. The evidence proved to be conclusive, and Ferrers was sentenced to be hanged at Tyburn. Appeals were made to the king for clemency, but in vain. Ferrers met his fate with considerable bravado. He was carefully attended for the occasion and treated on providing a silver cord for the ceremony. To this within the executioner agreed, and the Earl was turned off otherwise like any other felon.

French Bakers. Bakers in France are subject to restrictions and regulations undreamed of in England. In the fortified towns along the frontier they are bound by law to have a certain stock of flour always on hand in case of emergency. The bakery not only has to be kept clean, but the baker has to deposit with the local authorities a certain sum of money as a surety for the proper conduct of his business.

The law also looks after his weights and measures, which circumstances places him in the same position as the British baker, but in addition the law regulates the price at which bread can be sold.

Napoleon III ordered on one occasion that a loaf about equal to our quarter should be sold for not more than sixpence, and this at a time when we were paying eightpence and ninepence.—London Tit-Bits.

A Sympathetic Memory. In a western Massachusetts town lives a young woman who is blessed with both discrimination and tact.

The first of these admirable qualities she has displayed by her two marriages. Her first husband was a minister, a most delightful man. He died, and after a lapse of five or six years she was united to his only brother, who was a successful lawyer in New York.

On her library desk stands a picture of the first partner of her joys and sorrows, and one day a curious caller asked whom the photograph represented.

"That," said the hostess, with evident emotion, "is a picture of my husband's brother, who died eight years ago and who was very dear to us both."—Youth's Companion.

Generous. "What's your favor?" asked old Flint, skin of his catby the other day and was met with the stereotyped reply: "Well, sir, I will leave that to you."

"Thank you; you're very kind," said old F., buttoning up his pockets and walking off. "You're the first person who ever left me anything yet."—London Fun.

A Love Letter of Prince Blomarek. "On my window sill, among all sorts of crocuses and brachyotus, stand two carnations which always inspire me with strange thoughts. One of them, slender and pretty, with its ornamental crown (top) and soft, pale-pink petals—pink blossoms, but little foliage and only two buds, transports me to Juliet, holds itself rather stiffly and looks English. The other makes far less impression of beauty as you look at it, and its stalk betrays in its gnarled twisting look of care in its pruning. From the midst of the foliage looks out a dead branch, but the crown is rich in leaves, and the foliage is greener than that of its neighbor. It gives promise of abundant blossoming in its eight buds, and its color is deep dark red and white in irregular gay variegation.

Do you take the comparison amiss? It is a lame comparison, moreover, for I do not love carnations, because they are without odor, and you I love precisely on account of the fragrance of the flower of your spirit, which is white, dark red and black."

Black and Pink. Two clerks named Thomas and Clarence were in the employ of a wealthy merchant. Thomas was always an industrious lad, but Clarence was much given to frivolity and was extravagant in his habits. In after years Clarence married his employer's daughter and was made a partner in the business.

Thomas continued to be an honest, industrious clerk all his life, and his services were much appreciated by Clarence and his father-in-law.

By Way of Suggestion. "The trouble with me," spoke the young man who was on his way home with his hat and overcoat from a party at the Knickerbocker, "is that I always feel embarrassed when I am out in company. I never know what to do with my hands."

"Suppose you just hold them up," said a boisterous voice in his ear.

The voice pertained to a large, rough looking man with a muck on his face and a large, rough looking revolver in his hand, and the youth lost no time in complying with the suggestion.—Chicago Tribune.
