

MAYOR THOMASON PRAISES TANLAC

Judge George Washington Thomason, Mayor of Tarrant City, Ala., and one of the most highly respected citizens of the state, is still another man of prominence and unimpeachable integrity to give his unqualified endorsement to Tanlac.

"Chronic indigestion brought me to the verge of a general break-down three years ago and nothing seemed to afford much relief," said Judge Thomason. "I could hardly eat enough to keep going, and became so weak and nervous I could hardly attend to my duties.

"Finally I started on Tanlac and six bottles fixed me up so fine that I felt ten years younger, and my good health still remains with me."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Easy Way to Make Home Improvements.

Almost every man likes to do little jobs of building, particularly when by doing them he can make permanent, labor-saving improvements around his home.

If you have been wishing for a sidewalk that will keep the house clean and the feet dry—non-rot steps and porch floors, ornamental gateposts—any one of dozens of improvements, you will be interested to know that you can now obtain complete directions free of cost.

The best concrete construction experience has been drawn upon to provide these directions. You will find everything you need to know about small jobs—how much cement to use, how to mix the concrete, what tools to use, and all the rest.

A request to the Portland Cement Association, 111 West Washington Street, Chicago, will bring this free booklet, "Concrete Around the Home," by return mail.—Advertisement.

Game-Hog and Flivver

The Automobile is Great for the Killers, but it is H-I for the Game
—Dr. W. T. Hornaday

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
EVERY fall with the arrival of Jack Frost America's game problem pushes to the fore. It used to be a spring problem, too. But spring shooting has been practically pushed off the map by national legislation.

America's game problem is merely a specific, up-to-date presentation of George Herbert's old question, "Wouldst thou both eat thy cake and have it?" How can we both shoot game and not exterminate it is the problem. There is a like problem as to game fish, as to the forests, as to scenery, as to soil.

The occasion of this article is an article in Nature Magazine, Washington, by Dr. William T. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological garden, denouncing the hunter's use of the automobile. And Dr. Hornaday's text is this:

"The automobile is great for the killers, but it is H-I for the game. The motor car sounds the death knell for American game, unless prompt action is taken."

Of this phase of the problem more later. For like all big problems this American game problem has many phases which must be considered to get a comprehensive view of the situation.

The general proposition is that civilization and wild animal life cannot exist together. Even if adequate game laws are adequately enforced, settlement of a region inevitably brings about flight or extinction of all wild animal life, except migratory birds. A century hence the only place where an American can see American big game in its natural habitat will be the national parks and similar national reservations where nature is preserved in its original wildness and absolute sanctuary for wild life obtains.

For the immediate present and the near future there are many encouragements for the sportsman—the man who loves hunting for the sport's sake, hates a game-hog and abhors commercial slaughter. Through laws, education, sportsmanship and organization the destructive ideas of taking without returning, of destroying without restoring, of using up in the present without providing for the future are being replaced by saner views among the 6,000,000 or more hunters of the country.

The sportsman is the gentleman of the outdoors. It is difficult to define the gentleman and therefore the sportsman. There are, however, certain things that the sportsman habitually does. And one of these things is that he obeys the game laws. Another is that he never kills more game than he can use. A third is that he always gives the game a fair chance—he does not shoot birds unless flying; he uses light tackle in angling; he stalks the deer. In sharp contrast is the story told by the photographs reproduced herewith.

One tells how two men have used a motorcycle and sidecar to chase down a deer and get within rifle shot. Another, sent to Dr. Hornaday, tells how several shooters have used an automobile to pursue quail, marking the flight of the coveys and following relentlessly, matching the speed of machinery against that of wings and covering as much country in hours as a man on foot would cover in days.

A third tells a remarkable story, quite up to date. It shows a lake where the fish lie off from shore and fight shy of a boat. Two men come to the lake armed for slaughter. They fill three small balloons from a hydrogen gas tank, attach them to a line baited with a live field mouse and float the apparatus off on the wind. A fish is hooked. Thereupon one of the men collapses the balloon with a gun and the other pulls in the fish. Why not use dynamite or drain the lake! Either would be as sportsman-like.

The picture of the girl is used simply to show that everybody is doing it—even the girls are shooting nowadays.

One cause for encouragement is that migratory waterfowl and insectivorous birds, under present laws, have a chance to hold their own and to increase. As a matter of admitted fact both are increasing. It was only a few years ago that rapid extermination threatened the birds. Then after a prolonged and bitter fight congress passed a law, based on the interstate commerce law, abolishing spring shooting and creating zones of sport, open and closed according to season. The United States Supreme court pronounced this law unconstitutional. But real brains were behind the movement. Elihu Root is credited with showing the way out. The United States made a treaty with Canada for the protection of the migratory game birds common to both countries. Congress passed an enabling act and under the treaty the law that was pronounced unconstitutional by the Supreme court is now protecting the birds in the United States and Canada.

One great migratory route for birds that nest in Canada and winter on the Gulf of Mexico—perhaps the greatest—is along the Mississippi. The states along the river have now become so settled that old-time resting and feeding places have mostly vanished. But bird sanctuaries are being established at intervals through various agencies. On the Gulf Edward A. McIlhenny, long known for his protection activities, has now increased his holdings to 100,000 acres of feeding grounds. This tract, with the Rockefeller foundation of 88,000 acres, the Rainey-McIlhenny and Louisiana state wild refuges of 62,000 acres, the Sage foundation of 78,000 acres, and other small areas in friendly hands, assure the protection of a block of about 750 square miles in Louisiana, with an unbroken Gulf frontage of 75 miles.

One danger to wild life is the movement all over the country to drain and reclaim marsh and swamp areas for agricultural purposes—an inevitable result of increasing population. In the last congress a bill prepared to meet this danger passed the senate. It provides for the creation of government bird refuges and public hunting grounds to be paid for by a system of federal licensing. The house defeated the bill. It will be revived in the Sixty-eighth congress.

A powerful influence in the saving of game from extinction is the discovery by many of the states that their game is of great value in dollars and cents. Maine, Minnesota, Washington, California, Pennsylvania and other states profit to the extent of millions of dollars each year because they have good sport to offer to home and visiting hunters and fishermen. These states have passed and are enforcing hunting and fishing laws intended to make it possible to eat their cake and have it, too. When cake means hard cash the cake box is less likely to be emptied. Other states, with covetous eyes on these dollars, are taking measures that will ultimately put them in the same class.

There is an affiliation of nationwide organizations with approximately 4,000,000 members committed to the general principles of wild life preservation. The power of this affiliation has lately been shown in congress by the defeat of bills permitting commercial invasion of the national parks.

Dr. Hornaday, pointing out that there are now in use in this country 10,500,000 automobiles, says, among other things:

"It is my estimate that the automobile has increased the perils of wild life by 50 per cent; and thus far I have found no one who has contended that this figure is above the mark. It seems that the hunter of upland game—grouse, quail, woodcock, snipe, doves, rabbits, squirrels, and deer—can by means of his new gasoline ally hunt over at least four times as much ground in a day as the man behind a horse could exploit.

"Wherever there are roads either good or bad, or open plains over which automobiles can travel, there will you find the automobile going 'h-I bent' after whatever game is afoot.

"Show me anywhere this side of the summits of the Rocky mountains and the sawtooth peaks of the Sierra Nevada any territory with game in it that is not combed over by hunters in automobiles.

"In some places it may be possible to prohibit by local laws the use of automobiles in hunting. Such a proceeding could be carried into effect anywhere by men who are not afraid!

"The one thing, however, that would count heavily, and put an everlasting crimp in the flivver, is a fifty per cent reduction in all bag limits, and in the length of all open seasons, and reducing the automatic and pump shotguns to two shots. But as yet the masses of sportsmen of America have shown no signs of endorsing this program. Can anything make them see, before it is too late, that now they are, with fearful rapidity, exterminating their own game and their own sport according to law?"

"What's de dove?" the preacher called out.

"Inside de cat!" was the muffled response from above.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

'LESSON FOR OCTOBER 28

SOME MISSIONARY TEACHINGS OF THE PROPHETS

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 60:1-3; Jonah 4:10-11; Micah 4:1-3; Zeph. 3:9.

GOLDEN TEXT—"The Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising."—Isa. 60:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of Jonah.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Love for All Nations.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Prophets as Missionaries.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Missionary Message of the Prophets.

Perhaps the best way to teach this lesson will be to note the message of the individual prophets.

1. The Message of Isaiah (Isa. 40:1-3).

1. Its Central Fact (v. 1). Israel's light, her Redeemer, has come. The primary meaning of this is not the incarnation of the Redeemer, but His manifestation in glory and power as He comes back to this earth to reign as Israel's King. This glorious fact is presented under the figure of a bright sunrise. It will be a glorious morning without clouds dawning upon a dark world.

2. The Ringing Summons (v. 1). Messiah himself calls Israel to arouse herself from her long sleep of indifference and shine forth in the glory of her glorious king.

3. The Darkened Earth (v. 2). In spite of all the progress of the arts and sciences spiritual darkness—blindness touching spiritual things—has settled down upon the earth. It will be peculiarly gross in the last days. It can only be dispelled by the glorious appearing of the Lord.

4. The Blessed Result (v. 3). The Gentile nation shall come into the light, being attracted to Zion by the appearing of the Lord. In the midst of such darkness the sudden appearing of the light shall attract the nations and draw them to Jerusalem.

II. The Message of Jonah (Jonah 4:10, 11).

Jonah was commanded by the Lord to go to the wicked city Nineveh and proclaim its destruction in forty days. He started in the opposite direction in order to escape this unpleasant task. A storm came up and the superstitious sailors threw him overboard. He was swallowed by a great fish and after three days and nights was cast upon the shore. Having learned the needed lesson he went to Nineveh and preached with such earnestness that the whole city repented. The mercy shown by the Lord in sparing this wicked city so angered Jonah that he went out of the city and improvised a shelter where he could see whether God would really destroy Nineveh. To protect the prophet, God made a gourd to quickly spring up and throw a shade over him. When the gourd died and left Jonah exposed to the burning sun he prayed for death. The particular message of Jonah is that God is great in mercy to all the nations when they penitently turn unto Him from their sins.

III. The Message of Micah (Micah 4:1-3).

In this message the prophet portrays the blessings of the Messiah's kingdom in the last days. Three things are predicted:

1. The Supremacy of His Kingdom (v. 1). It shall be exalted above all the kingdoms of the earth. Its glory shall attract the people from afar.

2. The Extent of It (v. 2). Many nations shall come with the urgent request that others accompany them. The kingdom of Messiah shall be universal, it shall extend from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth.

3. It Shall Bring Peace (v. 3). Enmity will then be taken from men's hearts and they will love each other. When their hearts are changed they will no longer wage war against each other, they will even destroy their implements of warfare. War will continue till men's hearts are regenerated. The way to get wars to cease is to get men to love Jesus Christ.

IV. The Message of Zephaniah (Zeph. 3:9).

Zephaniah declares that, following the judgment upon the nations God will turn the people from their impure speech so that they may call upon Him. He declares that God's will is that all nations turn from their filthy conversation and call upon Him. He desires that all nations should come unto Him.

Christianity.
In order to abolish Christianity the one thing needful is to get rid of Sunday.—George Holyoake.

To Appreciate Institutions.
Fairly to appreciate institutions you must not hold them up against the light that blazes in Utopia.—Viscount Morley.

Mammon.
Mammon has enriched his thousands, and has damned his ten thousands.—South.

The World.
We may despise the world, but we must do without it.—Baron Wessen.

After Every Meal
A universal custom that benefits everybody. Aids digestion, cleanses the teeth, soothes the throat.
