compete and progress."
Friday said his proposal would make health insurance accessible to people of all income ranges.
But Joe Straley, a Chapel Hill resident who attended the forum, said he was skeptical that a plan for universal health care would succeed.

"I believe that half of the plans probably will not work," he said. "I'm sure that insurance companies are not going to be altruistic to give up their profits."

But Straley said he thought the health-care crisis needed immediate attention. "Basic health care should be a human right," he said. "Also it's the least to ask of a democracy. Every other democracy

United States?"

offers basic health care. Why not the Kay Wijnberg, chairwoman of Chapel Hill-Carrboro Coalition for Health Care Reform, said North Caro-lina and the nation shared the same health-care problems.

"The two main problem areas of the health-care system are affordability and access," she said. "The cost of health care is too high, making it unaffordable for most of us."

Wijnberg said residents of North

Carolina's rural communities were at a significant disadvantage.

"Many citizens have inadequate access to health care, especially those in small communities and remote rural areas," she said. "They also have difficulty recruiting and maintaining healthemploited from a contract the bar of the property of the property of the contract of the contr care providers."

The Chapel Hill-Carrboro Coalition for Health Care Reform sponsors public events to help citizens become more educated, Wijnberg said. These events address the health-care crisis and options for reform, she added.

The forum was sponsored by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Coalition for Health Care Reform.

The coalition consists of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro League of Women Voters, the Peace and Justice Committee of The Community Church of Chapel Hill and the North Carolina Consumers me they will see that I am for real," he Patillo said a friend encouraged him

Patillo said a friend encouraged min to get involved in local politics. Patillo said he hoped to become an important local political leader some day, but he added that he would think more about that after serving on the Greenways Commission.

27 and will continue until March 7, the day of the basketball game, Finn said. For the two universities' recycling centers, the contest is much more than a friendly game.

Cristina Perez, a recycling assistant in the UNC Office of Waste Reduction and Recycling, said the contest could boost campus recycling efforts.

"The competition is an incentive for people to recycle who haven't recycled before, and for them to become familiar with all the things we recycle," she said.

Not only does the contest help the environment, but it also provides the opportunity to win prizes.

The first prize consists of two tickets to any concert at the Smith Center before June 1. The second prize is dinner for two at a restaurant that is not yet chosen and the third prize is a $25 gift certificate to a record store that also has not yet been chosen.

If UNC wins, prizes will be distributed to the three residence halls that recycle the most. Each winning dormiry then will have a drawing among its residents to decide who wins the prize.

Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski has been contacted about the competition, Finn said. Button said Dean Smith would be contacted sometime next week.

Button said he encouraged fraternities and sororities to take their recyclables to outdoor bins on campus.
