month, started the scoring just 8:06 into the game with a header off a Keri Sanchez corner kick.

"(Venturini) looked to be 100 percent to me," head coach Anson Dorrance said. "She's changing the point of the attack so well for us right now."

"The thing I liked about (Venturini's) play is, obviously, she's dominant in the air. I think she demonstrated that on her corner kick goal."

The next goal came when midfielder Danielle Egan crossed the ball to the front of the goal. Senior forward Mia Hamm, who was directly in front of W&M goalkeeper Maron Rojas, skipped over the ball and let it slide to Rita Tower, who touched the ball to the back of the net.

Although UNC would only need the two goals to seal the win, it got insurance tallies from Debbie Keller and Hamm.

With only a few minutes remaining in the first half, defender Zola Springer sent a long serve into the penalty box. Freshman forward Keller trapped the pass and shot the ball past Rojas from 12 yards out.

William & Mary's only goal was scored on a penalty kick with one minute left in the first half. A UNC foul was called when Tribe forward Coleen Dejong got tangled up with Tar Heel goalkeeper Shelley Finger and defender Sanchez.

Hamm scored UNC's fourth and final goal on a free kick just outside the penalty box. A Tribe defender took down midfielder Angela Kelly 12 minutes into the second half. The referee signaled for a direct kick, but the Tribe defense must have mistaken the call for an indirect kick. As Hamm crushed the ball into the net, goalkeeper Forward Mia Hamm had a goal and an assist in UNC's 75th consecutive win.

Rojas simply stepped out of the way. The Tar Heel offense had its usual domination of scoring attempts, out-shooting the Tribe 26-5. Still, W&M had more scoring attempts and more play in its offensive third than most teams see against UNC. UNC also defeated Virginia on Friday, in a 2-1 scare in Charlottesville. Tower scored the winning goal, lifting UNC out of a 1-1 tie, with just 12:46 left in the match.

what's carried us to where we are now."

Every other team in the ACC has lost at least one starter to graduation. Some have been hit worse than others. Georgia Tech, for example, lost its entire starting five.

"Besides Carolina, almost everybody has had major losses," said Duke head coach Gail Goetsenkos. "I felt like not only did we lose numbers, but we lost key players in the conference."

Virginia lost twin towers Heather and Heidi Burge and playmaker Dena Evans to graduation. Maryland lost first team All-ACC center Jesse Hicks. Upstart teams like Wake Forest and Duke hope the 1993-94 season is their chance to sneak past the traditional powers into the league's upper half.

Freshman Trio Leads Cross Country To Highest Ranking in UNC History

BY ERIN PARRISH STAFF WRITER

Women's cross country coach Andrew Alden says the performances of his freshmen have been "pleasant surprises." But no one is more surprised than the runners themselves.

The trio of Susannah Matsen, Karen Godlock and Blake Phillips is making an unexpected impact on the eighth-ranked Tar Heel squad.

Matsen, whose parents run marathons, took up the sport at age nine, competing in road races and Junior Olympics. A Morehead Scholar from Seattle, she took off one month in the summer to attend the National Outdoor Leadership School. Spending a month at NOLS interrupted her training, and she did not expect to be able to make an immediate impact on the team.

"My goal was to be in the top seven," said Matsen, the team's No. 1 runner. "I guess I just got in shape quickly."

Matsen won her first collegiate meet, the Tar Heel Invitational, and has been the team's most consistent finisher.

"I was seriously injured for two-and-a-half years," said Matsen. "I had shin splints, stress fractures that just wouldn't go away."

Although she was able to run competitively for all four years of high school, Matsen was forced to modify her training regimen to include running in the pool and biking to lessen the wear and tear on her legs.

Matsen thinks the years of being injured kept her motivated. "I missed it so much," she said.

Matsen's role model is runner Patti Sue Plummer. Plummer, a miler and 3,000-meter runner, is a practicing lawyer as well as a 1992 Olympian.

"She's not just a runner," Matsen said. "I try to run for fun, because a lot of people get really stressed out about it. It becomes something that manages them."

Karen Godlock, a three-time North Carolina class 1-A/2-A State Champion from Polk County, has placed in the Tar Heel top five in every meet.

"Karen is such a natural runner," senior Julie Armour said. "I can't see her burning out."

Godlock says she is making the adjustment from high school to college well. Relatively unchallenged through four years of track and three years of cross country, Godlock is unaccustomed to running with a team.

"The big transition is I get to run with a group of people," she said.

The self-effacing Godlock is not one to make predictions about her performance. "I just do whatever God enables me," she said.

Godlock is enjoying getting used to her new coach and becoming friends with her new teammates. "Everyone supports each other," she said. "We talk to each other while we're racing."

The third member of the freshman class who has contributed to the Tar Heels' record success this season is Blake Phillips. Phillips, who began running in the ninth grade and attended private school in Winston-Salem, was North Carolina's seventh finisher at the State Championships at Western Carolina. She is probably the most surprised of the freshmen at her success this season.

"I definitely wasn't expecting to run this well," Phillips said.

Coming from such a small school where she had only her coach to train with, Phillips is also glad to have a team. She appreciates the team's fun outlook. "We talk and laugh," she said.

Armour characterizes this year's crop of freshmen as laid back, yet serious about running. "They're not stressed out," she said. "They're taking the pressure well, they're adjusting well, and they're running so awesome."

The North Carolina freshmen are happy to be able to contribute this early in their college careers, but they are not afraid to look beyond this season.

"It's fun to improve, to dream about faster times," Matsen said. "I'm really excited about our possibilities."

Wallace and Jeff McInnis in UNC's vaulted freshman class, took rookie honors. Other candidates include Duke's Joey Beard and Maryland's Keith Booth.

Smith recognized the immense talent of his incoming class. "You would anticipate the three freshmen being in the first nine (players who play)," he said.

has got to have North Carolina on their minds because they've got everybody coming back," said Florida State coach Marynell Meadors.

Everybody includes 11 letterwinners—two seniors, five juniors and four sophomores. The starters are:

■ Tonya Sampson, a senior who led UNC in scoring with 21 points per game and could dominate a game with her quick defense.

■ Sylvia Crawley, a senior who scored 10.5 ppg and pulled in 5.4 rebounds per game.

■ Charlotte Smith, a junior who led the team with 9 rpg and was second on the team with 14.9 ppg.

■ Stephanie Lawrence, a tireless defender who also scored 8 ppg and hit the winning 3-pointer in UNC's 74-73 overtime win in the second round of the NCAA tournament against Alabama.

■ And Jill Suddreth, a 5-foot-5 point guard who performed the ball-handling duties for the Tar Heels last season.

Off the bench, the Tar Heels will look to 6-7 Gwendolyn Gillingham and 6-2 forward Carrie McKee.

On Sunday, Hatchell also praised her two incoming freshmen, guards Lori Gear and Marion Jones.

"Except for Tonya, we just have a lot of overachievers," Hatchell said. "That's what's carried us to where we are now."

Every other team in the ACC has lost at least one starter to graduation. Some have been hit worse than others. Georgia Tech, for example, lost its entire starting five.

chemistry. Last year with George and Henrik we played great defense, and the team was very close.

"It's going to be difficult to replace that kind of leadership and experience. That would be the No. 1 concern I have right now—chemistry and defense."

Duke followed the Tar Heels in the preseason poll, getting 578 votes to UNC's 666. Georgia Tech and Virginia round out the upper division.

Florida State, which will get three players—Charlie Ward, Chuck Graham and Andre Reid—back with the team full time in January, was selected fifth. Clemson, Wake Forest, Maryland and N.C. State rounded out the preseason selections.
