

UNC Bats Beat Fightin' Christians Doherty Named Irish Coach

By EVAN MARKFIELD
Assistant Sports Editor

The North Carolina baseball team was in desperate need of some offense Tuesday afternoon against Elon.

And though they had to wait a few innings, the Tar Heels (23-5) finally got it from two sources - one unlikely and the other a usual suspect - to outlast the Fightin' Christians 8-5 at Boshamer Stadium.

Reserve catcher Wes Reynolds did the bulk of the offensive damage, hitting two home runs and knocking in five runners. Center fielder Jarrett Shearin plated two more to become UNC's all-time career RBI leader.

"I've just gotten a couple of fastballs, and I'm feeling fairly relaxed at the plate," Reynolds said. "As a result, I guess sometimes you get lucky."

Reynolds' first blast, a three-run shot just inside the left-field foul pole, gave UNC a 4-3 lead in the fourth inning after freshman Tar Heel pitcher Joey Popovich dug himself into an early hole.

Popovich, in his first career start, exhibited control problems as he gave up three runs and four walks over 1 2/3 innings.

The veteran Shearin, not to be outdone by the sophomore Reynolds, contributed to the Tar Heels' second comeback effort of the afternoon. His sacrifice fly to left in the seventh scored left fielder Dan Moylan, knotting the score at 5 and giving Shearin 192 career RBI to tie him with Devy Bell for the all-time mark.

But UNC's slugging tandem had to wait until the bottom of the eighth to put the icing on the cake.

Reynolds led off with a solo shot to right-center, and Shearin tripled to score Moylan again and take sole possession of the school record.

"It's an honor (to break the record)," said Shearin, who opted to stay for his senior season at UNC despite being selected in the major league draft. "I didn't really stick around to set any records, but that's just a bonus."

The big bats of Shearin and Reynolds were sorely needed after the Tar Heel pitchers allowed Elon (9-21-1) to take the lead on two occasions.

UNC's Jay Madeira stopped the early bleeding when he replaced Popovich in the second and got through two more innings without allowing a run.

But things went awry for Madeira in the fifth as he allowed two runs on three hits to give the Fightin' Christians a 5-4 edge.

UNC coach Mike Fox then summoned Derrick DePriest, the Tar Heels' closer, to the mound, and DePriest (2-2) came through.

The junior struck out a career-high nine as he worked 4 1/3 innings of two-hit, shutout relief to get the win.

"It turned out in a way that was good for our team, for us to get behind," Fox said. "We came back from a three-run deficit and a one-run deficit and scored late. That was good to test us a little bit."

SOUTH BEND, Ind. - Matt Doherty was hired Tuesday as basketball coach at Notre Dame with hopes the long-time Kansas assistant can return a lackluster program to national prominence.

"It's a very proud moment in my life," Doherty said. "Everything that Notre Dame stands for represents how I try to live my life."

Terms of Doherty's five-year contract were not disclosed. He replaces John MacLeod, who resigned under pressure March 9.

Doherty, 37, passed up a chance to play at Notre Dame after he was lured to North Carolina by then-Tar Heels assistant Roy Williams. He went on to play on the 1982 national championship team with Michael Jordan and James Worthy before he graduated in 1984.

Doherty inherits a program that finished 14-16 last season and has had only three winning seasons since MacLeod took over for the 1991-92 season. Notre Dame's last trip to the NCAA tournament was in 1990.
