DAILY DOSE

Long lines? Just eat bugs

How far would you go to jump a line in an amusement park? The Six Flags park in Gurnee, Ill., is offering unlimited line-jumping privileges to anyone who eats a live cockroach.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals wants the theme park to scrap its Halloween-themed promotion, saying it's 'gratuitously cruel.'

NOTED. Cheerleaders at Brown University were a no-show at the school's first football game Saturday.

Several quit after a new coaching policy deprived them of a professional coach. Citing financial reasons, Brown's athletic department put a student in charge of the team after its coach stepped down.

QUOTED. 'I got caught up in the moment and proposed. I then realized it was a hasty thing to do.'

Pop singer Aaron Carter talking to Us Weekly about breaking off his engagement to his older brother's ex-girlfriend. Carter, 18, called off the engagement to actress Kari Ann Peniche, 22, just a week after he proposed in Las Vegas.
