Man bought beer for his toddler sons

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A Wisconsin father bought beer for his 4-year-old son and shared it with the boy's 2-year-old sibling at a county fair. When police approached him, he yelled, swore and was kicked off the fairgrounds.

The man told the officer he thought it was legal for underage children to drink in Wisconsin as long as they were with their parents. But the officer said the boys weren't old enough to agree to take a drink.

The woman working the beer tent told an officer that she thought the man was joking when he asked for a beer for his son.

NOTED. A former New Orleans pastor was sentenced to seven months in jail after he stole the church's hurricane relief funds.

He deposited $45,000 into a personal account and spent $10,000 on a new vehicle after the church, which had no flood insurance, received $252,000 from a federal disaster loan.

QUOTED. "He'd stolen it thinking he'd get some beer, and it was completely empty."

— Sgt. Jeff Skuza, of Fargo, N.D., commenting on the recent arrest of a 21-year-old who allegedly stole a beer truck, then dumped the vehicle when he realized that it wasn't full of alcohol.
