Coats Are Good Buys at February Sales

HARRIET ADVISES AGAINST BUYING "BARGAINS" THAT HAVE ONLY LOW-PRICE TO RECOMMEND THEM—KEEP NEXT YEAR'S STYLES IN MIND

BY HARRIET
THIS is the time of year when women should remember that nothing is a bargain unless it is something she needs, wants and can use.

For nothing takes self-control more by the forelock than the alluring winter sales that tempt everywhere during the late winter months.
There are several things that the careful woman can save money on, if she keeps her head. Shoes, purses, gloves, lingerie and hosiery are safe bets, but even here one must remember her general color scheme, whether she wants accessories for daytime or more formal use and just what she needs most.

Choose With Care
In the matter of frocks, this is the dangerous time in a woman's year. For there is usually more change in styles between winter and spring modes than in any other seasons. Therefore, anyone purchasing bargains in frocks and suits must look to several points: be sure of some skirt fullness, watch for original methods of treating the neckline, choose plain colors in preference to patterns, for patterns change with seasons, and have assurance of somewhat greater length in skirts than winter demanded.

Harriet describes these charming coats in detail in the accompanying article. Coats of similar style are recommended for purchase now for wear next winter.

Therefore coat styles are of genuine interest now.
There are two very different types of winter coats that should be bargains indeed, if one can find them reduced.
First comes the dark cloth coat of more or less smooth surface, Lido cloth or something like that. Black is always good, navy blue or Oxford grey and perhaps brown might be classed standard colors now. I am sure of all of the colors save brown. There is great difference of opinion whether the vogue for brown can survive another winter.
I show this week the conservative black coat (left), with ample fullness to wrap around and allow space for sitting. This has a removable cape of black Persian lamb bordered in gray. It is immensely voguish, flattering to any woman who wears gray well and pre-eminently correct. Since the cape collar can be removed, the plain neck of the coat underneath can be worn with a colorful scarf for a change.

Style Endures
This is the kind of a coat that will be equally as stylish two years from now. Moreover, it is quite likely that next winter will see little fur capes like this one (they used to be called collarettes) worn with suits. So this coat may be even more stylish and useful next winter than now.
On the right I show the newer cut of coat that still is new enough to be assured of continued vogue for next winter. It is a medium tannish homespun tweed, fitted slightly with quite a flare to its skirt portion. The sleeves are cut in one with the body of the coat and the closing is diagonal.
There are cuffs and a small collar of seal, a fur that always is charming and never out of style. Any coat similar to either of these would be more than a safe bet to buy at the sales this late winter, if one can locate such models. Buying either, Milady can well boast a "bargain."

LIFE'S NOBLE AIM
path of life winds on and on,
own many-a lonely road;
so we plod a one by one
to bear our heavy load.
Trials of our daily walk
come not by fate or chance;
we should guard our daily talk and shun the wrong at glance.
Fray of life is hourly fought
by men of every class;
victories won and virtue wrought
did much the surging mass.
may not know the help we give while striving for the right; others see the way we live and struggle on with might.
Smile we shed abroad today
may cost some effort strong, it cheers another on his way
and speeds the marching throng.
burden'd hearts of men react in little deeds of love,—
so the life we give, in fact,
is bless'd by God above.
path of life has curve and hill
to test our weary feet;
now and then a daffodil brings fragrance, O how sweet!
may we on our pilgrim's keep heart, as up we rise,— we may bless both youth and age
and win a worthy prize.
dry a tear, o' heal a soul
that's wounded in the strife, but to play the Master's rule and walk as He through life.
may we ever reach to give lift to pilgrims near,— we always strive to serve and live
as did our Savior here.
