Plenty Pasture Land Is Available In State

There is sufficient land available at this time on most North Carolina farms to provide adequate pasture for all livestock kept without interfering with land being used profitably in other crops.

"There are three classes of land to be considered first for sod," says Sam J. Kirby, pasture specialist at State College. "These are lands too wet, rough or steep for cultivated crops, cut over lands, and idle cleared lands. It may be necessary to use other types so that the pasture may be had near the barn and with available water supply or to make fencing less expensive. But with due consideration to these exceptions, the three types of land mentioned will more than provide adequate pasturage for all the livestock kept in this State."

Mr. Kirby insists that an acre of good pasture should be provided for each animal unit and he says an animal unit is one cow, one horse or mule, five hogs, seven sheep or goats, and 100 hens. Two acres of poor pasture will not take the place of one acre of good pasture. In preparing for a pasture a thoroughly pulverized surface soil with a firm, compact subsurface is the best preparation.

Lime and phosphates are essential for a success with grasses and clovers and are also necessary for the animals which graze the sod, says Mr. Kirby. An application of one ton of ground limestone and from 300 to 500 pounds of fertilizer an acre analyzing 8-3-3 or 12-4-4 gives splendid returns. Barnyard manure applied as a top-dressing in the second or third year is beneficial. Top-dressing with quick-acting nitrogen usually pays well. Spring seeding should be made between February 20 and April 30. Fall seeding should be done in September or October with the lespezoza, carpet, Bermuda and Dallas grasses going in the next Spring.
