SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

Sunday School Lesson.....
 Review
 Lesson for March 25th. John 10:7-16.

Golden Text: Isaiah 9:6.
 During this first quarter we have studied some of the principal episodes in the life of Jesus, and have come to grips with basic emphasis in His teaching. Beginning with His birth and childhood, we considered His baptism and temptation, and saw Him launched into the varied phases of His dramatic ministry. We also read the Sermon on the Mount, the sublime epitome of His teaching. We listened to His testimony concerning His own power to heal, cheer, and comfort. And we learned lessons from His parables.

This Sunday assigned for review affords an excellent opportunity for taking stock. Suppose we ask, "Why is Jesus still indispensable? Why is He real today?"

One answer is to be found in the timelessness of His glorious message. What is this message? It is summed up in that splendid proclamation He heralded at the beginning of His ministry, "The kingdom of God is at hand." What is this kingdom? It is a realm over which a sovereign God presides. It is a commonwealth in which love and obedience, not fear and calculation, reign. It is a society in which the individual human soul has absolute value. It is a beloved community where spiritual purposes are supreme. And finally it is a brotherhood whose inward spring is the living Person of Jesus.

Another reason for the Master's continued hold is His sureness of tread in the religious field. He spoke with authority, as one long familiar with the truth He proclaimed.

But a more important explanation of Jesus' attractiveness today is His constant companionship with God. As Dr. Henry Coffin says, Father and Son are united in conscience, toil, and endurance. The Master released His spirit so completely into the larger life of God that He became one with the Father. And there can be no doubt that He found in God the resources He needed.
