That Justice May Ever Have A Champion; That Evil Shall Not Flourish Unchallenged.

Entered at the Postoffice at Warrenton, North Carolina, under Act of Congress of 1879.

Defend the poor and fatherless, do justice to the afflicted and needy.—Psalms 82:3.
Never chase a lie; if you let it alone it will soon run itself to death. You can work out a good character faster than calumny can destroy it.—E. Nott.

Newspapers and merchants everywhere are proclaiming "Do your Christmas shopping early," and the good sense of the suggestion is apparent to all. The last-minute rush of remembering some one by an appropriate gift is not exceedingly complimentary to the one whom another desires to remember nor is it the part of good buying sense. The goods are on display now. Select the Christmas gift and be ready to enjoy the holiday.

An appeal is made by the Lions Club for old toys which may be patched up and distributed among some of the unfortunate children of the county during the Christmas season. Likewise, the Welfare Department is calling for old, discarded wearing apparel to warm the bodies of destitutes of the county during the winter months. We believe a reminder is all that is necessary to cause the good and more fortunate citizens of Warrenton and Warren county to contribute the articles in order that suffering may be reduced and the yuletide season be more enjoyable to both the giver and the receiver.

LET US HAVE YOUR COPY EARLIER, PLEASE

We call on the merchants who use the columns of The Warren to call attention to their wares and encourage trade to their stores to give this newspaper more cooperation in supplying their copy.

Of course we want the ads, they are the substance on which a newspaper thrives financially, but it works a terrific hardship on us when we are required to call at the stores several times a week for the copy and then not be able to receive a good portion of it before Wednesday afternoon, some times as late as Thursday afternoon at 5 or 6 o'clock.

The request that we come back tomorrow for an ad and the late hour in which we do finally receive the copy often times necessitates the entire force being kept down here until nearly day-break in order that we may give you the paper on time. In the days when this office was operated by a group of oacheors it was only tiresome and unpleasant to be required to work all night. But now, since the biggest percentage of the personnel of the office is married, it is impractical, and must be avoided except in emergencies.

We trust that the merchants will remember that we do not like to work all night any more than they do and with that in mind will let us have their copy a little earlier.

SHOULD NOT TAMPER WITH WHISKEY LAW

Warren county's Representative, T. H. Aycock, left yesterday for Raleigh to attend the special session of the legislature called by the governor to pass laws which will assure this state benefits under the Social Security Act. Representative Aycock has assured us that he will not offer any bills before the regular session begins in January and stated that he was anxious to go there, finish the business for which the special session was called, and then return to his home here. We hope the other Representatives and Senators feel the same way about the matter.

However, if any move is made at the special session or the regular session to tamper with the whiskey laws in order that the state may receive part of the revenue from the sale of alcoholic beverages, we hope he will fight to the last ditch to prevent any such legislation.

If any county, now theoretically dry, wishes to have whiskey sold within its borders because the citizens of that county feel that conditions would be improved and because they desire additional revenue, it should move for legislation which would permit the setup of A. B. C. stores, but we do not think the "dry" counties which do not want legal whiskey have any right to endeavor to get part of the revenue, other than the benefits which come to them at present through the sales tax on whiskey, from the "wet" counties which have gone to the expense of holding elections to let the people decide on the matter and then set up the stores.

As long as it is legal for certain counties to engage in the sale of whiskey, we do not think the state has any more right to part of the revenue than it would have to part of the proceeds from a community fair, or a pig sale, sponsored by one of the counties.

"State's Rights" used to be the cry which rang out from our forefathers when the government committed some act that appeared to be unjust, and if the state continues to try to hog every source of revenue which becomes available in the various counties, we are going to hear something of "Counties' Rights."

car parking on Main Street. I think there should be no parking at all on Main Street by the owner or employer of any of the business firms, except when loading and unloading their goods. They can provide plenty of space in their back yard to park their cars, and the space in front of their place of business should be given to those who go to them to spend their money with them, and if they appreciate their patronage they will be willing to do this. Just think of the many people coming in from a distance, many of them ladies, having to drive around several blocks several times and then finally having to park their car on the back street. Then after spending their money with you, take their bundles and walk several blocks down the back street to their car. You are really losing trade to some degree on this account. I order many things from some mail order house for this reason.

Another thing I'd like to see done is to prohibit any congregating on sidewalk; sometimes it is hard to walk through the crowd without bumping into some one and often that person is under the influence of liquor. I wish our town of Warrenton would be what it could be. I hope the lawmakers of the town will at least consider this situation and work according to their consciences.

STATE PROBLEMS

ward Klidder Graham, Walter Hines Page, Dr. Clarence Poe, and others—but said this: "I'm concerned with the predicament they've gotten us into."

"They looked out and saw the gilded towers of a new State," he declared. "But North Carolina at that time was like Br'er Rabbit—in the briar patch. They had to learn us our ABC's, clean up disease, take us out of the mud by building roads . . ."

"Now, North Carolina no longer is occupied in establishing an honest and stable government. Above all, she is no longer concerned with that mystical and arithmetical problem: 'What fraction of a Southerner does it take to whip a Yankee?'"

North Carolina is concerned, however, he said, with the "three-cornered, cut-throat game," of tenant farming and the "unhealthy and miasmatic spot" known as the mill village with its "monotony, ugliness and isolation."

"North Carolina has two assets," Polk said. "They are—land and people." Give municipalities the power to tax outdoor advertising, he urged. Give the State power to tax bill-boards by the square foot, the proceeds to go into a fund for landscape improvement about North Carolina highways.

The $1,000 homestead exemption amendment recently passed by voters and federal loans for farmers who want to buy their own land "may" help rid the State of tenant-farming, he said.

Children Write To Old Saint Nicholas

Two appeals to Old St. Nicholas not to overlook them this Christmas have found their way to this newspaper office this week. They are printed below as received:

Dear Santa:
I am a little boy six years old. I go to school in the first grade. I have learned to read and write. Please bring me a scooter, watch, cowboy suit and pistol and some fectionarys. Yours truly,
VIXEN HARRIS,
Littleton, N. C.

Dear Saunta Claus:
I am a little girl in the fifth grade at school. I am ten years old. I don't know if you remember me or not, but I am the one which met you on main street in Henderson, N. C., and told you I wanted a dollbed and a dollbed and a dollbed about fifteen times.

I want adoll with a bottle, bedroom slippers, bathrobe, shoes and some galoshes. I want the galoshes to fit my shoes. It takes about size twelve and a half shoe for me. I heard you had broken your leg and cut yourself. I am mighty sorry if it is true.

Your friend, a plan of the Lions Club to provide Christmas baskets and toys to needy families and underprivileged children in Warren county. Ralph Williams, president of the Beta Club, will direct the collecting of the toys. Those living out of town are invited to send broken or discarded toys to the school by school children or others.

Those moving through the exhibit lingered longest nearly always in front of a portrait found many years ago in a fisherman's cottage at Nags Head and believed to be of Theodosia Burr, daughter of Aaron Burr. The painter, said Robert Macbeth of the Macbeth Galleries in New York, is believed to be John Vandelyn, one of the great early American painters. Macbeth arranged the exhibit here, and spoke on the convention program Tuesday night.

Theodosia Burr, Macbeth said, was the wife of John Alston then Governor of South Carolina. In 1812 she sailed from Georgetown, S. C., for New York to see her father, and neither the ship, Theodosia or anyone aboard the ship was ever seen again.

About 60 years later a Dr. Poole found the portrait in the cottage of an old woman at Nag's Head. The old woman told a story of how the painting had been given to her about sixty years before by her husband. Macbeth theorized Pirates along the North Carolina coast had made Theodosia Burr and everyone else aboard her ship, "The Patriot," "walk the plank."

At any rate, he concluded, that little portrait "has the most romantic story behind it of any piece of American art."

It was sold to my father in 1913 and this is the first day it has been back in North Carolina since that day.
Macbeth praised the store and Mrs. Arrington for the work done and especially that the Society was able to celebrate its 10th anniversary. "Most of those celebrating their first anniversary never celebrate a second," he said.

Public Pulse
