WHO electrified Rural North Carolina?

Sure, the REA co-ops helped do the job. And in doing so they have performed a valuable service.

BUT . . . investor-owned companies such as CP&L are serving about 60 per cent . . . THREE OF EVERY FIVE . . . of the rural electric consumers in this state. REA co-ops are serving 32 per cent and municipal systems about 8 per cent. These figures are based on information from the 1962 report of the North Carolina Rural Electrification Authority.

CP&L is proud of its rural customers and of its own record of supplying them electric power at a price that is well below the average for the nation.
