Warren Native Is Subject Of Article In Norfolk Newspaper

Miss Rebecca Collins, a native of Warren County, recently retired after 43 years service with W. G. Swartz in Norfolk, where she was needlecraft instructor, to make her home with her sister, Miss Ann Collins at Ridgeway. Her work and her retirement were noted by the Virginian-Pilot in a feature article, "Needles Reach End of Skein," by Cammy Sessa, as follows:

GREAT GIFT
"No matter whom she taught, her great gift was patience," said a friend, Miss Della Grey.
Her patience wore thin at times, Rebecca admitted. "Regardless how often I would say, 'knit two, purl two,' women would start to purl first," she said. "But I always made them pull out the bad stitches."
She was so vehement about ripping out students' mistakes, a customer sent her a post card addressed to, "Miss Becky Pullout." The card was delivered to her; she's been known by that name since.

WILL LEAVE CITY
Miss Collins, who dresses with the dash and verve of a young girl, intends to leave Norfolk. She will return to her home town of Ridgeway, N. C.
Another thing she's sure of—she's not going to sit and knit.

A Fine Example

At a time when the need for educated citizens is becoming more and more apparent, the announcement that the Warren Cotton and Fertilizer Company of Warrenton will annually give two $500 scholarships to students of Warrenton schools is certainly good news, and adds to the boost given to education in Warren County by the recent announcement that the county ranked high in the number of boys and girls who continued their education beyond the high school level. So long as Warren County is willing to sacrifice to train its boys and girls we feel that in the long run other things will take care of themselves.

C. E. Rodwell, president of the Warren Cotton and Fertilizer Company, said that the scholarships are being awarded in appreciation of the fact that Warren County citizens have been good to his company and to him. He said that identical scholarships are offered to both white and colored students in recognition of need of students of both races and in recognition that his business had been built upon patronage of both races. This acknowledged recognition, we think, reflects credit upon Mr. Rodwell. The size of the scholarships, we think, reflects credit upon the business sense of Mr. Rodwell. While even the smallest scholarships help students in their efforts to obtain a college education, the fact might as well be faced that $50.00, $100 and even $200 scholarships are seldom decisive as to whether a boy or girl will attend college. But scholarships of $500 and more can mean the difference between a college education and no college education.

In extending the thanks of our citizens to Mr. Rodwell and his company, we trust that his example will encourage other prosperous citizens of the town and county to give of their means for the education of our boys and girls of both races. Such donations, whether to student loan funds, to individual school foundations, or to scholarships can mean a great deal to public education and to the advancement of the county.

Student Stockholders

We were intrigued by the little story telling how the "Business Principles" class in the Norridge, Ill., High School wrote to Tulsa's Livingston Oil Co., asking for the annual report. It seems the class chipped in and bought a few shares of stock in various companies. It has eight shares of Livingston and so far has a $16 profit in that stock.

One of America's problems is the vast amount of ignorance among young Americans as to how free enterprise works. Impressions range all the way from belief that stockholders are big profiteers down to the assumption that the stock market is a slot machine, only crooked.

Wouldn't it be healthy if a lot of high schools followed Norridge's example? Say you have a class of 40 students. Set up an investment trust with $1 shares and let each student buy from five to 10 shares preferably with money he has earned. If the average purchase is $7.50 you'd have $300 to play with. Select an investment committee under the chairmanship of the teacher. Visit a brokerage house. Buy shares in three companies. Keep a weekly record of the fluctuations. Balance dividends against brokerage fees. At the end of the year, sell out and let the kids pocket their profits or take their loss.

Looking Backward Into The Record

It is important to learn that money isn't easily made by those who share the opportunities and headaches of private business. But it is also important to learn that even if your $10 share drops to $8 you are still $8 ahead of the kid who blew his 10 bucks on a couple of twist records.

Tennis, Anyone?

The sturdy Finns, who think nothing of skiing 50 miles a day, have disclosed a national record that ought to put to shame Americans caught up in the 50-mile hike craze.

In an international contest with Sweden in 1941, Finnish women and children from 10 to 14 were asked to hike 10 kilometers (6.2 miles) in less than one hour and 40 minutes. Men were required to walk 15 kilometers (9.3 miles) in less than two hours and 20 minutes.

In a 22-day period, 1,500,000 Finns out of a total population of 3,700,000 passed the required test. They enabled their country to defeat Sweden because "only" 954,000 Swedes completed the test.
