GARDEN TIME

Be careful what you buy and where you buy it. This is the time of the year when you may be visited by someone selling nursery stock; fruit trees and grapevines; shrubbery and trees for landscaping your home. Some of these people are honestly ignorant of what they are doing, while others make offers which they know they cannot carry out. In either case, you are left holding the bag and faced with keen disappointment after it is too late to do anything about it.
This malpractice is not as prevalent as it was in former years but there is an outbreak every now and then. Your reliable nurseryman is licensed to do business in North Carolina and all of the plants he offers for sale are inspected and certified by the Division of Entomology of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.
Buy only from a reliable nurseryman or seedsman, and he will back up any claims made by his representatives.
It has been my privilege to work with the nurserymen of North Carolina for many years, and I have found the members of the North Carolina Association to be reputable and anxious to serve their customers honestly and well. In almost every case, cheap nursery stock is, in the long run, the most expensive you can buy.

What I have said about the nurserymen is also true for the members of the North Carolina Seedsmen's Association. So many things can happen in the production, cleaning, classification and packaging of seed that he must be always on the alert to see that you get varieties which are true to name, free of diseases and obnoxious weed seed, and of good germinating quality.
It is not too early to make a list of the tree fruits, small fruits, grapes and ornamental trees and shrubs you will need for all and early winter planting. Placing your order early will assure getting the varieties you want. The nurseryman will reserve them and deliver according to your instructions.
Don't overlook the plants native to your region; yaupon, certain oaks, dogwood, hemlock, white pine, rhododendron, etc. You may wish to try some of the hybrid rhododendrons. They come in a wide variety of colors and have a much wider range of adaptability than our native sorts.
A North Carolina nurseryman told me this summer that "we will soon have hybrid rhododendrons adapted for growing as far south as Florida."

A Tribute To J. C. Moore
JAMES CARR MOORE (1893-1969)
By ROBERT B. HOUSE
James Carr Moore, universally known as Jim, carried lightly the burdens of worldly success and an unusual degree of personal grief and suffering. Instead he cherished deeply three magnificent gifts of life that gave him inner peace and strength. They were his enjoyment of a lovely home and family, his rock-ribbed Presbyterian faith inherited from his preacher father and his teacher mother, and a wide and democratic circle of congenial friends.
His wife, Lucy Russell Palmer, was manifestly the queen of his heart and home. She gave him his greatest personal joy, and her death some years ago gave him his deepest sorrow. They were a perfect unit in their home and in perfect devotion to their son and their three daughters. They each had the gift of complete faith and understanding of their children, and, through them, of all children. Their home was famous in Warrenton as a place where children were free and happy, and enjoyed. It was the gathering place of all the neighborhood children as they started on their daily adventures, and the scene of their play and refreshment toward the close of day.
Jim Moore's education began in babyhood in his home under the counsel of his father and the teaching of his mother. It was mightily reinforced by Warrenton High School under John Graham - Sydney College where he earned his professional degree of B. S. in Electrical Engineering. He carried lightly his learning, but he was deeply influenced by the Bible and religious study under his father, and English, mathematics and the classics under his mother. He took as by nature to the little Warrenton Presbyterian Church as a lifelong lay reader, Sunday School teacher, and supply preacher.

other means 20, total distribution 3350, office use, left-over, unaccounted, spoiled after printing 50, total 3400.

Reports TO THE PEOPLE

WASHINGTON, D. C. - A 71-year old grandmother who is the vigorous head of an embattled and strategic nation paid an official visit to Washington last week.
Mrs. Golda Meir, Prime Minister of Israel, flew here by El Al airliner from Tel Aviv and held talks with various United States officials, including President Nixon, Congressional leaders and State Department officers.
I serve as Chairman of the Near East Subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and had the pleasure of being with Mrs. Meir on several occasions. As a matter of fact, we had breakfast, lunch and dinner together during the course of the first two days of her visit.
Mrs. Fountain and I first met Mrs. Meir at a luncheon given by Secretary and Mrs. William Rogers in Anderson House. Mrs. Meir dressed nicely but plainly. She wore no makeup and her dark graying hair was pulled back to a heavy bun on the back.
Mrs. Meir's face, stern in repose, is often wrinkled by a very pleasant smile and her eyes are warm. She has a very friendly appearance. The Israeli Prime Minister walks slowly and rather heavily because her legs are plagued with phlebitis and varicose veins. She speaks English fluently because she was raised in this country.
Her sister, Mrs. Clara Stern, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, says that Mrs. Meir is really a homemaker at heart but that she has always been a leader in everything she has undertaken.
We also saw Mrs. Meir later the same day during a glittering White House State Dinner given by President and Mrs. Nixon in her honor as one of the leading female political figures in the world. Among the approximately 100 who attended were members of the Cabinet, major Jewish leaders and several members of the Senate and House. Mrs. Billy Graham of Montreat, N. C., was also in attendance.

I might add that a very moving piano and violin concert was provided later in the evening by Leonard Bernstein at the piano and Isaac Stern with his magic violin.
Prime Minister Meir gave a moving toast and response to the kind and friendly toast of President Nixon. She expressed her own appreciation and that of her people for the friendship, help and understanding of the United States. In opening her remarks, she said, "This is a new day for Israel", and I guess it was in many ways; for that brief sentence indicates that negotiations with our government for help were going smoothly. Decisions about this may well be announced from the White House or State Department before you read this report.
Next morning, following the White House dinner, Mrs. Meir hosted a breakfast for several ranking members of the Near East Subcommittee. We met at Blair House, where she was staying, and which incidentally, was at one time the home of the family of Mrs. Adolphus Stator, widow of the late Admiral Adolphus Stator, a native of Tarboro, North Carolina.
I had the pleasant experience of sitting next to Mrs. Meir and lighting several of her cigarettes. I couldn't quite determine the brand. Naturally, also, I heard quite a bit about the problems of Israel and the present status of relations between Israel and the Arab world. I must say she has a very disarming manner, with the warmth and friendliness of a devoted grandmother and also the qualities of an astute statesman.

Once a schoolteacher in Milwaukee, Mrs. Meir married and moved to Palestine in 1921 and has lived there ever since. She soon became active in the labor movement and played a prominent role in the movement to create a Jewish state there.
After the state of Israel was established in 1948, Mrs. Meir served as Minister to Moscow and then became Minister of Labor in 1949. Later she served for ten years as Minister for Foreign Affairs of Israel.
Following the death of Prime Minister Levi Eshkol last February, Mrs. Meir was called out of semi-retirement to become Prime Minister.

Traffic Heaviest On W. Salem Expressway

RALEIGH-The Winston Salem Expressway, a portion of Interstate 40 within the city, is the heaviest travelled road in North Carolina, records at the State Highway Commission reveal.
With 52,000 cars passing over it daily, the expressway leads Downtown Boulevard in Raleigh by 1,000 vehicles.

The traffic counts, made by the Highway Commission's Planning and Research Department, show figures for 1968, the latest that are available.
Here are the 10 highways with the heaviest traffic counts and their daily totals.
1. Winston-Salem Expressway, 52,000
2. Downtown Boulevard, Raleigh, 51,000
3. Independence Boulevard, Charlotte, 42,500
4. West Asheville Bridge on US 19, 42,500
5. Interstate 85 (Death Valley) Greensboro, 38,100
6. North - South Boulevard, Winston-Salem, 38,000
7. Bragg Boulevard, Fayetteville, 37,200
