

Warrenton Woman Is Named To Commission

A Warrenton woman has been named by Governor Bob Scott to a 60-member commission charged with the task of bringing the organization of the Democratic Party to North Carolina up to date.

Mrs. Eva Clayton was listed as a member of the commission by Governor Scott last Friday.

The governor told a news conference that Wilson attorney James Hunt, a former state Young Democratic Club president and now assistant to the chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, would serve as chairman of the group.

Hunt immediately announced the commission will conduct four regional hearings next month at which Democrats will have the opportunity to suggest changes in the party's plan of organization.

The hearing schedule follows: Nov. 1, Asheville Travelodge; Nov. 8, Barringer Hotel, Charlotte; Nov. 22, Sheraton-Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh; and Nov. 29, Holiday Inn, Greenville. All hearings will start at 10 a. m.

The State Democratic Executive Committee will meet in Raleigh Jan. 13 to act on the commission's recommendations.

Scott pointed out that those appointed to the commission "come from all walks of life and represent as many shades of political philosophy as we could get on the commission."

"This is how it should be," Scott said, "for the proposed study commission's work surely will be doomed if all the people are not represented in such an important undertaking."

Hunt said the party needed to take "some major steps to: 1. Bring more of our responsible young people into positions of importance in our party;

2. Facilitate a transfusion of new blood" into the ranks of our party's workers;

3. Make our operations more Democratic;

4. Generally modernize our rules and organization consistent with the times."

Hunt said he did not expect miracles to be accomplished and "we are not going to make people who are mad about their taxes less mad."

He said the intent of the study "is not to bring about a situation where the party will be dominated by any minority group." Named to serve on the commission in addition to Hunt were:

Former Gov. Dan K. Moore of Raleigh, former Gov. Luther H. Hodges of Chapel Hill, former Gov. Terry Sanford of Fayetteville, James V. Johnson of Charlotte, Lt. Gov. WARREN COUNTY'S PRIZE WINNING EXHIBIT AT STATE FAIR

Warren 4-H Exhibit Wins Second Place

The Warren County 4-H educational exhibit was judged second place winner at North Carolina State Fair in competition with eleven other counties.

Warren County's educational exhibit was on "Bicycle Safety." The theme of safety was portrayed with a boy riding a bicycle without using his hands. "Look Mom - No Hands" was the title of the exhibit. A safety dog carrying a sign of safety rules was a highlight of the presentation. The front wheel of the bike was shaped in the form of a TV screen with cartoons on safety revolving past the opening.

It was observed that Warren County's booth was a very popular exhibit at the fair attracting most of the young people's attention and interest.

The exhibit was created and developed by County 4-H leader, Warren County Extension Agents, 4-H members and other interested people.

Mrs. Clint Hege of Norlina did the art work for the exhibit which was acclaimed by many people that saw it as outstanding.

In addition to winning second place in the 4-H educational exhibit, Warren County placed 5th in the 4-H county sweepstakes in arts and crafts.

The Warren County Agricultural Extension staff wish to thank all those who had any part in helping Warren County 4-H Clubs win this honor.

Farm Families Will Vote On Nickels For Know-How

North Carolina farm families will decide on Tuesday, November 25, if they wish to continue spending "nickels for know-how."

A referendum is scheduled for that date on the unique Nickels for Know-How Program through which farm people have aided agricultural research and education at North Carolina State University for the past 18 years.

The Nickels for Know-How Program was authorized by the General Assembly and approved in November 1951 by a statewide vote of farm people. It has since been voted on five times, and each time it has won the approval of about 90 percent of those voting.

By giving their approval to the program, farm people agree to assess themselves a nickel on each ton of feed and fertilizer that they buy.

The funds are collected by the North Carolina Department of Agriculture from feed and fertilizer manufacturers who add a nickel a ton to their wholesale price. The funds, an average of $160,000 a year, are then turned over to the Agricultural Foundation at North Carolina State University.

The foundation, which is composed of a representative from each county, decides how the money will be spent. During the current fiscal year, for example $183,052 has been authorized for 40 different research and education projects.

Around $25,000 of this amount will be spent for research on poultry diseases, and another $15,000 will be spent for research on poultry physiology and nutrition and for extension work with the broiler breeder industry.

Some $27,000 will be used for the horticultural crops, fruit and vegetable breeding, processing and weed control.

Nearly $20,000 is earmarked this year for insect problems including tobacco insects, wood destroying insects and the destructive alfalfa weevil. Over $17,000 is allocated to research and extension work related to livestock and over $16,000 will be spent on field crops.

Other Nickels supported research this year includes such things as food processing, marketing, plant diseases, soils, and water pollution. Funds will also be used to provide publications for vocational agriculture students and to support extension specialists located at Plymouth, Waynesville and Castle Hayne.

Agriculture Commissioner James A. Graham said, "Nickels for Know-How has been a most effective tool for supplementing agricultural research and bringing research findings to farmers for effective application." "Its effectiveness has been most plainly evidenced by the overwhelming approval it has received from farmers in referendums held at three-year intervals since the enabling legislation was enacted in 1951."

Commissioner Graham added.

Dr. H. Brooks James, dean of agriculture and life sciences at NCSU, listed four ways in which "Nickels" money has been invaluable to the state's agricultural economy.

"First," he said, "Nickels money gives us flexibility. We can initiate needed research immediately, instead of waiting two to three years for waiting for state or federal appropriations."

"Second," he continued, "we can use Nickels money to experiment - to prove the merits of a new program or idea - so that support can be obtained from other sources."

"Third," he continued, "we can increase the productivity of our key scientists by providing them with 'extra hands' in the form of research assistants."

"Fourth," Nickels for Know-How is strong evidence of the interest that farm people have in research and education. This evidence makes it easier for us to get support from agribusiness groups and from the general public."

Polling places for the referendum will be established in most communities of the state. All users of feed and fertilizer and their wife or husband are eligible to vote.

Warrenton Churches To Sponsor UNICEF Friday

The Community Youth Fellowship of Warrenton from the Baptist Church, Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, the Presbyterian Church and Emmanuel Episcopal Church will sponsor Trick or Treat for UNICEF on Oct. 30.

Mrs. Scott Gardner in announcing the festivities said that "Children in more than 100 countries around the world are growing up a little healthier, and a little happier because of UNICEF. When you give to UNICEF, you are helping in a big way."

Pointing out that our world is shrinking day by day, Mrs. Gardner said that "because of many scientific advances, we know more about other countries than ever before. We know more about the children of Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East. The growing countries of these regions cannot yet provide the basic needs of all their children. Many children have serious problems. In UNICEF's World: 1-4 out of every 5 children receive no medical care, either to prevent or cure illness. 2-3 out of every 4 children suffer from malnutrition. Some may get enough to eat, but they do not get the right kinds of food. 3-About half the children do not go to school or must leave school before they finish the primary grades. 4-UNICEF's job is to help countries solve these problems. UNICEF equips schools and clinics and it helps families and communities to learn about nutrition and health. It aids the training of nurses, teachers and many others who can help children in their own countries. UNICEF's goal is a world of healthy children who have a chance to grow and develop their talents.
