COMMUNITY BUILDING BEFORE PAINTING

Jr. 4-H'ers Get Their Building Painted

During the year, the maintenance of the Junior 4-H'ers of the Cool Spring Community has been focused on getting their community building painted, G. W. Koonce, Agricultural Extension Agent, said yesterday.

Their first step, he said, in accomplishing this was raising enough money to cover the expenses. To do this they worked on a series of fund raising drives.

In their drives the junior 4-H'ers sold a stainless steel kitchen utensil that could be used as a turner, chopper and serving spoon. They also sold blue antique oil lamps. Both of these sales ended with much success.

To stimulate more interest in their project, the junior 4-H'ers decided to have a health queen contest—the girl raising the most money for the painting of the building would be crowned queen. From these three projects the 4-H'ers were able to obtain more than enough money to cover all the expenses of getting their building painted.

The second step in reaching their goal was getting someone to paint their community building. For this, they retained the Rev. Mr. Burnette of Warrenton, an experienced painter.

Now that the job is completed, the 4-H'ers as well as others of the community are very proud of their community building, Koonce said. From the above picture you can see that their pride is justified.

Farmers Asked To Keep Records Account

Farmers doing conservation cost-sharing work under the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) are asked to keep careful track of the date they are to report the completed work.

T. E. Watson, County Executive Director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said it is important that the ASC Committee have a report on hand by the time the work is to be completed. "The funds allocated for the job are not supposed to be tied up past that date unless they have been earned."

"We always have more applications than we have cost-share funds for ACP practices, and it's not right for us to keep funds set aside for a practice when we don't know whether the farmer completed it or not," he said.

If a farmer is not able to complete his conservation work before the completion date, he may ask for a time extension by phoning, writing or visiting the County ASCS Office. Time extensions should be requested before the practice completion date, Watson said.

"Sometimes a person misplaces the form which he is supposed to sign and send or bring to the County ASCS Office when his ACP work is done," Watson said. "In that case, he should phone or write to say the work has been completed and then drop by at his convenience to sign a duplicate form kept on file at the County Office."

"If he has misplaced the form and doesn't remember his completion date, all he has to do is get in touch with the County ASCS Office—someone will look it up for him," Watson added.

Occasionally circumstances prevent a farmer from completing his approved ACP conservation practice. "We're always sorry to hear it, but we appreciate hearing in time to re-allocate the funds," Watson said. "It's a good neighbor deed to let the County ASCS Office know as soon as possible, because it might mean giving another farmer a chance to put in a needed conservation practice this year."

Kindergarten News

Harris Kindergarten has completed their first four weeks. We had one who had tears the first day, but of course that was because he drank too much water for breakfast and it came out of his eyes. He was fine the second day and with the others, can't wait for kindergarten time each day.

We have learned to whom we belong, to tell who we are, and where we live.

In crafts and art we have made Mr. Turtle, drinking straw cat and big chief loose feather.

Mrs. Banzet To Direct Duke Drive

DURHAM — Mrs. Julius E. Banzet, III, of Warrenton has been named a class agent for the annual Duke University Loyalty Fund drive. She is one of almost 450 such agents throughout the country. Mrs. Banzet will be contacting other alumni for contributions to the 1970-71 fund.

Each year the drive is conducted nationwide under the auspices of the Duke University National Council.

Last year, 13,391 donors contributed a record total of $864,096.

Additional alumni support to the university, including restricted gifts, brought the total amount to almost $1,250,000.

Dr. Richard G. Connor of Tampa, Fla., chairman of the Duke University National Council during this 24th Loyalty Fund drive, stated that in the previous 23 campaigns, a record amount has been contributed each year.

"Few U. S. colleges or universities have as high a percentage to alumni participating annually in alumni giving programs as Duke, and we are proud of this fact," Connor said.

"Contributions received in the drive are used to support the teaching efforts within the university's various schools and colleges, and this year alumni may designate the particular school or college to which their contributions will apply."

The Duke General Alumni Association president this year is Granite Falls, N. C. banker John A. Forlines, Jr., elected last summer after serving as chairman of the National Council and heading last year's Loyalty Fund drive.

We do not mind leaving our home to go to our kindergarten which by now we know is really ours and our "Mrs. Harris" is ours too.

We can really swing our two songs which we love to sing. Of course, the veterans of last year, who were not of first grade age this year, are back to really prepare themselves for 1971 first grade.

Our give and take program has taught us to share and share alike.

For some, crossing the bridge from home to kindergarten and on to knocking on the first grade door is a slow and hard walk. If it can be made, we, at Harris Kindergarten, will surely make it.

So long for now, you will hear from us again before long.
