How To Have A Merrier Christmas

BY MRS. DAVID PROCTOR
Conservation Chairman
Warrenton Junior Woman's Club

Remember these safety hints in planning your Christmas decorations:
Use only electrical equipment approved by Underwriter's laboratories.
Keep all cords out of traffic areas.
Use only fire proof decorations.
Turn off tree lights before leaving the house or retiring for the night.
Check tree from time to time; if foliage is brown, relocate lights.
Use a ladder to reach high places on the tree.
Check all strings of lights. Do not use any that have chipped, frayed or damaged sockets, cords or wires.
Water the tree before needles dry.
Do not use candles near tree or flammable material.
Locate tree away from heat source to prevent drying.
Use only spot or flood lights on metallic trees.
Do not leave any empty sockets for fingers or decorative materials to get into.
Do not overload circuits.
Keep waste basket handy for disposal of gift wrapping.
Use only weatherproof cords and lights outdoors.
Keep all connections above wet ground.
Make connections watertight by winding with electrical tape or covering with plastic or rubber film securely bound by electrician's tape.

Easy To Make Movable Walls

RALEIGH—Need a movable wall? Mrs. Edith McGlamery, extension house furnishings specialist, North Carolina State University, says a few yards of brightly colored fabric can be used to create walls, hide eyesores and divide space.
Fabric hangings are used for architectural effects in place of permanent, rigid walls and doors, she adds.
A boon to the budget-minded, they are easy to put up, take down and keep clean.
To hide unfinished walls in an attic room, you can use hangings made of a colorful print. Or you can create a separate dining space in a small apartment by stretching panels of fabric across the ceiling.
A room shared by two children can be divided by hanging fabrics, perhaps in an awning stripe, from the ceiling drapery rods.

Congressman L. H. FOUNTAIN Reports TO THE PEOPLE

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Through many decades of strife and turmoil, the Statue of Liberty has stood in New York Harbor as a symbol of freedom to the downtrodden and oppressed peoples of the world—a beacon of liberty.
Inscribed on this magnificent statue's base are these words: "Give me your tired, your poor, Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, The wretched refuse of your teeming shore. Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me. I lift my lamp beside the golden door."
Those words from the pen of Emma Lazarus came sharply to my mind as the confused and deplorable story of the Lithuanian seaman, who sought and was denied freedom from Russian bondage, came to light.
We don't even know for sure the full name of this "tired," "homeless" man who yearned to breathe the precious air of freedom — reportedly it's "Simas Jonovich Kudirka," but we do know that he desperately wanted such an opportunity. He wanted it enough to risk his life to get it. He wanted freedom from the unbelievably harsh oppression and regimentation of his native land, Lithuania, which is now under Russian control. But, American officials refused him this chance and that refusal may cost him his life.
"Simas," the Lithuanian seaman, is reported to have begged and pleaded and to have even prayed to American citizens for safety aboard the American ship. His pleas and prayers having been ignored, he was forcibly taken from our ship after a bloody beating by his Communist fellow seamen.

It's completely understandable why anyone from a captive nation would want to escape to freedom in America. But, it's hard to understand why the United States Coast Guard and State Department, apparently after hours of indecision, would allow Russians to board one of our ships, to badly beat and drag back into human bondage a man whose hopes and dreams of freedom from tyranny had seemingly been achieved.
I'm told that the Coast Guard drew a fine distinction in deciding not to give him protection; that if he had jumped into the water first and had been rescued from the water, then the Coast Guard would have given him sanctuary.
But, great events seldom develop neatly and the man did not jump into the water. Instead he simply jumped—desperately jumped—across ten feet of open water from the Russian ship to ours. Since he did not get his feet wet, he soon found himself back in captivity again. Mind you, all of this took place in American territorial waters—less than three miles from land.
We're told that a meeting on fishing problems was being held with the Russians and that the Coast Guard ship and the Russian ship were tied up together. The meeting was reportedly held because Russian fishermen in increasing numbers are poaching in American fishing grounds on the high seas.
Nevertheless, this unusual meeting brings to mind questions about the basic wisdom of allowing negotiations to be conducted with the devious Russians in such an offhand and casual manner. But, be that as it may, the ships were moored together and the man did ask for asylum after notifying a member of the Coast Guard beforehand that he was going to attempt escape.
Regrettably, it's entirely too late to do anything to help this unfortunate man. He is once again firmly in the hands of his Russian slavemasters and they'll never let him go. Unquestionably, he faces a sad fate.
I am happy that the Administration has now taken steps—belated though they may be—to develop proper policies so that American officials will act with more wisdom and humanity and justice when the next Refugee case arises.
We should not callously refuse political asylum to those pitifully few victims who are able to successfully make their way to freedom from Communist lands.

Food prices rose less than three-fourths as much as all other consumer goods in the past ten years according to the latest reports from the USDA.

Special Concern Over Number Killed

RALEIGH—Motor Vehicles Commissioner Joe W. Garrett today expressed "special concern" over the high percentage of young people killed on North Carolina highways during the past weekend.

Garrett said that between 6:00 p. m. Friday and midnight Sunday, a total of 11 fatalities were reported to the Department of Motor Vehicles. Only two of those were above the age of 19. All died in single-car crashes and high speed was definitely a factor in at least four of the teenage deaths. Two youths died when struck by a train and one rode his bicycle into the path of an automobile.
"Any highway death is tragic," the Commissioner said, "but the needless death of these young people is particularly tragic. It is a great personal loss for the individual and their families and friends. Society has invested heavily in these young people—spent thousands of dollars on their education to insure long, productive lives — only to have this great potential vanish in one moment of carelessness."
"As we enter the holiday season, a vacation period for many students," Garrett continued, "we also enter a season when spirits are running high and when a higher percentage of our youngsters will be driving more than normally. I want to make a special appeal to them to drive with particular care. You prove nothing but your immaturity when you operate a car in a careless or unlawful manner. Please slow it down and live."
