Defense Attorney Frank Balance moved for dismissal of the case at the outset and for a nonsuit at the conclusion of the evidence. Judge Allen denied both motions, and ruled that Miss Green was guilty.

She was sentenced to serve six months in the Women's Department of State Prison. The sentence was suspended for three years upon condition that the defendant does not violate any rule, regulation, condition, instruction, order or direction, given either orally or in writing, by any school teacher, school principal or any other governing authority of the public school system where she is attending and that she pays a fine of $50 and court costs. Appeal bond was set at $400.

A non-suit was allowed in the case of Jesse McCoy Alston on the grounds of conflicting testimony. He was defended by Jerry Paul, who first moved that the warrant be quashed because he said it was improperly drawn and next asked for a jury trial, both motions being denied by Judge Allen. Mrs. Bruce Perkinson, a teacher's aid, testified that she saw Alston with a group on the school ground singing and chanting. Gerald Poplin, assistant principal at John Graham, said that Alston was one of four boys left in the auditorium when the fire was extinguished. When Paul established that Poplin claimed to have seen Alston in the auditorium at the same time that Mrs. Perkinson saw him on the school grounds, Judge Allen allowed a non-suit on the grounds of conflicting testimony.

Imogene Bullock, a 17-year-old senior, took the stand in her own defense, after Assistant Principal Poplin testified that he saw her twice on the school grounds, once while he was standing on the fire escape, when she called "Where is your brother?"

Miss Bullock said that she saw Poplin standing on the fire escape and spoke to him but denied saying "Where is your brother?" She said that she was on the school grounds, denied that she was engaged in disruptive activities, and did not go back into the school following a fire drill because she was afraid due to the large number of police officers in the building. She said that she remained on the school grounds until around 12 Noon when she went home.

Miss Bullock testified that she was in the A group at John Graham, had never had any difficulty with teachers or students and that she had hoped to graduate from John Graham next spring and attend college.

Alfreda Jordan, who is scheduled to be tried for disruption of school and for carrying a concealed weapon, took the stand in defense of Miss Bullock. She testified that she saw Miss Bullock on the school grounds but that she was not engaged in singing, chanting and shouting. Questioned about her own activities, Miss Jordan said she would take the Fifth Amendment (which states that no defendant must testify against himself).

Miss Bullock was found guilty. Prayer for judgment was continued for two years upon condition the defendant does not violate any rule, regulation, condition, instruction, order or direction, given either orally or in writing, by any school teacher, school principal, or any other governing authority of the public school system where she is attending, and that she pays a fine of $30 and court costs. She was bound to Warren County Superior Court upon her own recognizance.

Joyce Elaine Green was the only other student to take the stand. Her sister, Betty Malvern Green, had been identified by Gerald Poplin as being on the school grounds gesturing like a cheer leader. Joyce Elaine Green testified that her sister had not been gesturing like a cheer leader but that due to similarity in build he confused her sister with her. She said that she had been leading the cheers. Joyce Elaine Green had been found guilty of disrupting school the previous day.

Betty Malvern Green was sentenced to jail for 10 days. The sentence was suspended for two years upon condition the plaintiff pays a fine of $75 and court costs, and observes conditions imposed on all students relative to school behavior. Appeal bond was set at $75.

The terms of all other suspended sentences were the same as for Miss Green and Miss Bullock, except for the length of sentences, the amount of fine and the appeal bond.

The names of other defendants tried, the charge, prosecuting witness, the length of jail sentence, the amount of fine and appeal bond, respectively, are as follows:

Alton Alston - disturbing public schools; Mrs. Brenda Bobbitt, office secretary; ten days; suspended two years, $50 fine, court costs, and $75 appeal bond.

Information On Soil Use Released

By DONALD J. MANLEY
SOIL CON. SERVICE

The following information for soil interpretation for urban and industrial uses was furnished by Donald B. Stephens, Soil Scientist.

"Piedmont, North Carolina, is now undergoing dynamic changes. Most significant are the explosive developments of our landscape. Factories spring up over night, houses go up by the hundreds and bulldozers constantly reshape land. In the wake of this progress, severe land use problems become evident. We see buildings flooded after heavy rains, foundations of homes and schools crack and crumble, septic tanks fail, leaving home owners in misery, and whole yards wash away. You can probably name a few more problems, too.

"In almost all land use problems, misuse of the soil itself is noted. This misuse is not intentional but is preventable with careful planning. Concerned about these problems, many counties and planning boards are using soil surveys as a tool in area-wide planning. The Soil Conservation Service makes these surveys. Soil Scientists walking out the land and studying the soils, make inventories of all soil types on aerial photographs. They also provide detailed descriptions of these soil types.

"Soil surveys, with interpretations will provide for future land use planning and development of the area.

"Our concern at this point is to interpret this soil survey information for urban and industrial uses. First, let's consider some of the characteristics of soils. Each soil type shown on the soil survey will have one or more characteristics, that will influence land use. Some of these are; wetness, slope, permeability, depth to bedrock, shrink-swell potential, bearing value, and flooding hazard.

In addition, cases against six students charged with carrying a concealed weapon was continued until the January term of court. The defendants are Wesley E. Brant, Gwendolyn Champion, Larry Darnell Green, Alfreda Jordan, Timmy Perry and Carolyn Plummer.

"We need to know the land uses planned for these soils. Will they be for houses, industries, land fills, dams, roads, pipe lines, sports areas, or hunting areas? A soil suitable for one land use may be poor for another. Each soil type must be rated as to its limitation for each land use.

"Even soil on a 2 to 6 percent slope has a severe limitation for septic fields because of its slow permeability. Because of a light plastic clay subsoil, water flows slowly through this soil. This same area, however, is rated suitable for campsites. Applying sandy loam has a keep friable subsoil. On a 2 to 6 percent slope it has only a slight limitation for houses and septic tank fields. But, this same soil will have severe limitations for septic fields if the slope exceed 10 percent. A glance at a soil survey sheet may indicate that a certain area is a Chocoma soil. The interpretive material will show this soil to have severe limitation for all non-farm uses because of its flooding hazard. In dry weather, lots may be dry and look beautiful on the Chocoma soil, but wait till the floods come.

"Landfills are a popular way to handle our waste. Yet, if a soil such as Worsham is used, problems will arise. Worsham is a soil with poor drainage, refuse decomposing in this wet condition will give rise to foul smelling gases. Soil surveys pinpoint these areas to help prevent such problems.

"Sewage lagoons, roads, underground cables, ponds, and recreation areas can all be planned best by applying soils interpretation principles. If a certain soil is not suitable for the use you intend, another site can be chosen. Also another land use may be considered for this same site.

"It would be wise to investigate as to the type of soil before you make any purchase of land. By so doing, you could not only save a substantial amount of money, but also save yourself from many headaches."

Anyone desiring further information on soil surveys and interpretations may contact The Warren Soil & Water Conservation District Office.
