Salvage Yard

Opens At Macon

Riggan Salvage Yard was opened in Macon on May 10 at the home of John Riggan from where automobiles and other forms of scrap metal will be handled until such time as the owner can find a location on a railroad siding. He is at present considering a siding on the Warrenton Railroad Company, but its location is not yet definite.

John Riggan, owner of the salvage yard, is a native of Macon and a graduate of Macon High School. He is the son of Mrs. Emma D. Riggan of Macon and is a railroad contractor.

Riggan said this week that he hopes to build the salvage business into a $100,000 business within the next 18 months and that one of the reasons for its establishments is to help Warren County.

One having old automobiles and/or other scrap metal wishes moved are asked to contact Riggan Salvage Yard at Macon. The telephone number is 257-4829.

Carpets Now More Available

By BERTHA B. FORTE

The lower cost of today's carpet makes it available to an ever-increasing number of people. Most carpet purchases are made for color and style, with little thought being given to the other characteristics of the particular carpet chosen. The different types of carpet have their own characteristics, or changes, that will become evident. This does not mean a carpet is defective, but it is what should be expected from this type of carpet. Unfortunately, if the changes have not been anticipated, their appearance may make the purchaser unhappy.

The plush construction which is in great demand to today's consumer provides a good example of a characteristic that will develop. This construction is done by placing the cut pile yarns very closely together. The yarns are tightly packed and help to hold up adjacent yarns. The carpet may be either a solid or multicolor.

When a carpet is rolled for shipment, the ends of the face yarns will all lean toward the end of the roll. After the carpet is installed and vacuumed, the pile will have a uniform appearance. This uniform appearance is due to the light being reflected from a uniform surface.

Some changes can be expected after the carpet is used. The traffic areas will appear a little different from the adjacent, unwalked on areas. This difference occurs because the carpet pile has been compressed by footsteps. Vacuuming and brushing will help to raise the crushed pile. However, an occasional vacuuming cannot compensate for continual compressing of the carpet. The consumer will have to work to keep the pile erect.

Even though a conscientious program of vacuuming is followed, some changes will take place. The changes will be not only in the traffic areas but also in other sections which receive very little traffic. This change is more noticeable on solid colors and in the better grades of plush carpet.

The change may first become apparent as a large spot, as if something has been spilled. It may look like a water spot. The spot may be rounded or have a wavy shape, not really enclosing any area. If the fingers are run over the spot, it will be noticed that the pile runs in one direction until the edge of the spot is reached. The edge of the area will appear rough, or raised, but outside the area the pile runs in a different direction from that of the spot.

It is easy to determine that the carpet pile has changed directions, but it is not known why it does. No doubt, the change in the sections in the traffic areas can be attributed to the movement and force of footsteps. Pivotal areas can easily be explained as can sections in front of chairs and television sets, but these areas can continue under pieces of furniture. It is easy to predict the type of carpet in which the change will take place, but not where it will occur or why. This change has many names: shading, watermarking, pooling, highlighting, and pile reversal.

If an area is observed from one direction, it will appear to be darker than the adjacent areas. Viewed from another direction, the same area will appear lighter than the surrounding area. The reason for the change of shade is due to the amount of light being reflected from the area. When the sides of the yarns are viewed, more light will be reflected and the area will appear lighter than when one is looking at the ends of the yarn.

This phenomenon can be achieved by rubbing the hand over a small section of the carpet to lay the pile all in one direction. Then rub the hand in the opposite direction over a small part of this area until the pile is lying in the opposite direction. The lighter shade will be reflected from the sides of the yarn and the darker shade is produced by the ends of the yarn.

What can be done to correct this condition? In most cases, nothing. Vacuuming and brushing the pile all in one direction or professional cleaning may temporarily improve the condition. However, this changes only the top portion of the pile and shading will soon redevelop.

Shading is a characteristic of a plush carpet, and it should be expected to develop. It is not something which is due to neglect during manufacturing, nor is it something which the manufacturer can eliminate in a plush or a velvet type of construction. Shading helps to break up the plainness or sameness in a solid-color, dense, cut-pile carpet. It is a characteristic which occurs in good quality carpet and it should be enjoyed. However, if this characteristic is not appealing, then another type of carpet should be chosen.

Cancer Crusade Closes

The 1976 Cancer Crusade has come to a close. The final total reported by Annie Mae Alston, chairman of the Warren County 1976 Cancer Crusade, is $3100. Mrs. Fitz, service chairman, has noted that ten cancer patients received some service as a result of the 1975 crusade. The 1975 funds have been exhausted, however, and three applicants are on file for 1976 funds. It is hoped that these persons can be given assistance very soon, Mrs. Alston added.

Inadvertently left off last week's report was the report by Mrs. W. J. Skipwith, captain, with $256.91. She was assisted by Ms. Agnes R. Johnson, Anna Burchette, Jake B. Norwood and Miss M. E. Patillo. Additional reports turned in include Mrs. Bettie B. Jones with $10; Miss Lytonia Harris, $10.75; Mrs. Irene Fitz, $15; NS Mrs. A. M. Alston, $55.
