Poor Housekeeping A Cause Of Injuries

By L. B. HARDAGE

Extension Chairman

Some people when they see a mess can't wait to tear into it, never stopping until everything is spic and span. Others find cleaning up a major effort and a real bore.

Poor housekeeping about the farm, usually is a contributor to farm injuries and fires. Mislaid tools, litter, and other things lying about are major causes of slips, trips, and falls.

Accumulations of paper, trash, dry weeds, and the like fuel many fires.

Having a storage place for everything and keeping everything in its place will not only improve but also make you more efficient, you can find things when you need them, also make the place look better.

Cleaning up for safety is only half the job. You should also do some fixing up, such as inspecting and repairing old electrical wiring and equipment, servicing and restoring farm machinery, repairing broken steps, ladders and etc. Neglect can result in accidents that could have been avoided with a little effort.

With everything ready for the new farming season your chances of having a safer, more profitable and successful year are much better.

Many vegetables can be planted and should be now as soon as the land is dry enough to fix and plant.

If you do a good job with the home garden it will save money, however, many people plant gardens and don't really look after them, in this case it is doubtful if any money can be saved.

A debate on "The Equal Rights Amendment" was discussed among the group. The recreation hour was observed by playing bingo games and viewing the television program with the Jackson Five. Refreshments were served.

On Saturday night, the members took in a double feature comedy "Up Town Saturday Night" and "Let's Do It Again" at the Warrenton Theatre. This movie was enjoyed by all. Accompanying the 4-H'ers were Mrs. Elizabeth Durham, Mrs. Francis Somerville, Mrs. Helen Burnett, and Mrs. Sally Robinson.—Denise Bullock, Reporter.

Loss Of Hearing May Be Partially Prevented By Care

Loss of hearing in later years may be partially prevented by a little carefulness earlier in life.

Though often caused by the aging process itself, hearing loss is also caused by a lifetime exposure to noises.

Loud and continuous noises such as those from power lawn mowers, rock music and factory equipment may often be at a damaging level.

Noise causes a change in chemistry of hair or in the nerve cells of the ear, says Isabelle Buckley, extension specialist in aging at North Carolina State University. This can be compared to extreme fatigue in a muscle which requires time for recuperation. A stock car driver, for instance, may not be able to hear for days after a race.

Ear plugs should be worn when using a power mower, when hunting or whenever feasible to cut down noise levels.

Homemakers should consider noise as a factor when purchasing home appliances. As an example, shop for the vacuum cleaner with the most suction power rather than the loudest one, which is often associated with having the most power. Often the most powerful cleaner is quiet.

Hearing loss imposes one of the most disabling penalties on older persons—isolation from the fellow human beings. Conservation of hearing in younger years may result in keener hearing later in life.

Homes Should Be Aired For Safety

Resisting the urge to help warm your house by leaving the oven door open could save you and your family from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Because of the cold winter, many people are looking for additional sources of heat for their homes. In their rush to keep warm, they may forget to have a generous supply of fresh air in their closed-up rooms.

Carbon monoxide is produced when fuels burn incompletely, as do almost all fuels to some extent. However, when fresh air is provided and the fuel is burning properly, there is little danger of poisoning, say the extension specialists at North Carolina State University.

Only when an improperly adjusted fuel-burning heater is operated in a closed area can the gas build up to fatal levels.

If you use a fuel-burning heater regularly, make sure it is vented to the outside. If you must use one that isn't vented, leave a window open at least one inch. Turn it off completely at night.

Be particularly careful in mobile homes which are smaller and less likely to have adequate ventilation than do houses.
