

Cancer Campaign Rolls Into Gear As Plans Are Announced

The 1977 cancer campaign for Warren County was geared up on Monday night during an organizational meeting held at Southch 1 in Soul City.

Meeting with eight captains from last year, Mrs. Bertha Forte, unit manager for Warren County, and Floyd McKissick, chairman of Warren County's cancer campaign, the group made plans for the campaign.

During a fund-raising discussion, plans were made to canvass the area door-to-door by captains and volunteers, to request contributions from area businesses and merchants in Warren County and to have a program in the school system.

The school program will be "Send a Mouse to College." Local school children can become involved in the project by donating money for mice to be used in research. According to campaign members, a mouse used in college and hospital research for a cure of cancer costs 51 cents.

McKissick has written a letter to the county commissioners asking them to proclaim April as Cancer Crusade month and for permission to install a thermometer on the courthouse lawn to indicate monies received.

Another meeting has been scheduled for April 4 at 8 p. m. at the Warren County Courthouse "to kick off" the April campaign. A guest speaker from the state cancer society will be at the meeting.

Patience Is Urged

The abnormal weather of this winter is reason for rose growers to be patient in beginning their pruning work, according to a North Carolina State University agricultural extension horticulturist.

Henry J. Smith, NCSU extension landscape horticulturist, notes that the first week in March is usually the time when rose pruning begins in earnest in much of North Carolina. With the kind of weather that has predominated this year, early March may be too early.

Smith suggests that you consult a long range weather forecast for your area to help determine if there is the risk that another severe killing freeze is likely to come in late or mid-March.

"Once you prune the roses," Smith explains, "they will begin to prepare buds to emerge through the bark. We surely don't want these buds killed by a late freeze."
