It took her about a week to food, she said. The food was served in courses and more Miss Shearin was the was served at a meal causing her to gain weight.

In Paris she visited the Louvre, seeing the Mona Lisa, rode the Metro and visited museums, saw the famous landmarks and went to theatres. Her French family liked American movies and carried her several times. The movie admission was about the same price as in the United States but they do not serve hot popcorn or drinks.

But French people dress up more in formal attire. Laura was awed at the

The formality held over to the Lions meeting she attended. The meeting was very formal with the meal, served in several courses, lasting for three hours or more. Most of the people she met in France spoke English and the Lions were no exception. She presented pins to them and they gave Laura a banner signed by all the members of the club.

The Bernards visited cousins at St. Raphael on the Riviera. Laura said the temperature was about 75 degrees and women did not wear bathing suits along the beaches but the Riviera was as beautiful as she had heard.

While there she was tutored by a six-and four-year-old who could not understand why she didn't speak French. Laura returned to Noisy Le Roi speaking better French than when she arrived.
