

UNC Medical Staffers Cover Warren General

Two professors in internal medicine from UNC School of Medicine in Chapel Hill will maintain the Warren General Hospital patient schedule during the absence of Dr. Kirt Trivedi.

Dr. Wayne Smith, born in Warrenton in 1946 at the Hunter Clinic, and Dr. Evin Sides will alternate working schedules at the hospital during Trivedi's four-week absence.

Col. H. S. Andersen, hospital administrator, said the two young men, both "highly qualified" in the field of internal medicine, will commute to Warrenton from the Triangle area on a rotating basis.

He said he hopes that Warren General, through these two young physicians can acquire a full-time practitioner by January.

In addition, Andersen said the hospital is working with the Duke Foundation and the Area Health Education

Council, to develop the idea of a group practice for Warren General by next summer.

This week, Sides was in the hospital on Monday and Tuesday while Smith was available Wednesday. He is expected also to be in the offices today and Friday.

Trivedi left for India Sunday to attend the wedding of his sister, Mrs. Trivedi and children departed for India Nov. 6.

at a full 20,000 gallons per day capacity, while Norlina uses a lagoon system of treatment.

Soul City will be able to pump its sewage through the lines when Warrenton's existing sewer lines are upgraded next year with a $350,000 grant received by the town for this purpose. Work is expected to begin in January.

A $3.8 million grant is also being sought to enlarge the Warrenton plant and expand its capacity. When this work is finished, all three municipalities will be served by one treatment facility.

The municipalities have to negotiate further with Warren County, present owner of the force main and pump station, who must devise workable agreements and contracts for maintenance.

County manager Charles Hayes commented that with the pump station completed and sewer lines laid, the county has reached "the beginning of putting something together."

"It's a start in the right direction," Hayes said. "It gives us the nucleus to have a sewage capacity over a large area," considered a prime incentive for industrial placement.

He added, however, that the county must "have an equal water capacity before we can become a viable selling tool" to interested industries.

"It's a start, though, and it is a very positive start."

Bobbitt, III, and a senior at John Graham High School, has been selected by the Warren County Morehead Selection Committee as Warren County's 1977 nominee for the John Motley Morehead Scholarship at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

average student should be available next year.

"I don't feel my daughter is exceptional," insisted Mrs. Shearin. "I think she's average."

Mrs. Shearin said she is not sure that the schools are teaching the average. She said the general math class is too simple. While she admitted that her daughter has plenty of math work, it's the type of work that indicates the inadequacy of the course.

She said her daughter's English course has not progressed beyond the diagramming of sentences and that there is no literature book in which "to process the English."

"It is not too good to think about the new school coming up and to carry over these old things," Mrs. Shearin argued.

Mrs. Shearin was particularly concerned about her daughter's having skipped school. She attributed this to not getting what she needs in school. She said that her daughter had never been in trouble before.

Mrs. Shearin said she went to the school not to blame it, but to seek help from it.

"It all came out when I went to see the principal. It was the assistant principal I talked to. I asked him what we could do. He said, 'I don't see anything wrong; there's nothing to be done.'"

Mrs. Shearin said she does feel there is something to be done. She said something has been done and hopes it will continue.

Dr. L. B. Henderson said, "You've taken a major step by showing up at this board meeting," and Henry D. Bobbitt added, "You have to meet with teachers. If you don't get satisfaction, come right back here to the bids were let twice - Aug. 18 and Sept. 21 - before enough bidders responded.

Remaining funds will be used to convert the hospital emergency room into a suitable x-ray room and to move the emergency room into the current delivery room.

Proposed hospital projects in health planning region four, comprised of local government Regions J and K, must be approved first by Capital Health Systems, Inc. if project expenses are to entail more than $100,000.

Once approved by that agency, project applications are routed to the State Health Planning and Development Agency in Raleigh before reaching their final destinations at the federal HEW offices in Washington.

Andersen said the project was originally expected to cost approximately $124,000; however, equipment bids lower than expected reduced the total cost.
