Stamp Costs

(Continued from page 1) low-income families will be increased Jan. 1 to keep pace with rising food costs. Monthly net income eligibility standards also will rise for most households on Jan. 1 because, under current regulations, income limits in most cases are tied to the size of food stamp allotments. Under the regulations, income eligibility limits rise when food stamp allotments are increased. Food stamp supervisor Kinton said the net income limits would be the same in one- and two-person households but would begin to increase in three-person households with a maximum monthly net income of $460 set, reflecting an increase of $13. Net income limits, on a per person basis, rise proportionately thereafter. Kinton said the allotments and income limits normally rise each year in the winter to help offset increased unemployment and poverty.

Thieves Take Fill

A thief or thieves enjoyed a hearty meal of hamburger and milk following a break-in at Northside Elementary School last week.

Deputies Danny Bartholmew and Bobby D. Bolton of the Warren County Sheriff's Department said this week entry into the kitchen area of the school was made through an air vent.

The kitchen area was ransacked by the intruder and about 30 pounds of beef and 21 cartons of milk were reported stolen.

The investigation revealed fingerprints in the kitchen area and the deputies are continuing the investigation.

In other work, sheriff deputies Saturday night responded to a call by Mrs. Irene Fields on Rt. 2, Norlina (the Afton community) that a man was shooting at her house.

The heeding deputies found about ten rifle holes in the house where window panes had been broken. One shot was fired in the house.

A warrant has been issued for James Richardson of Warrenton, in relation to the shooting.

No one was injured although the Fields and their children were in the house at the time.

The deputies speculated a quarrel prompted the shooting spree.

Grant

In other business discussed at the regular monthly board meeting, members elected to begin awarding retirement certificates to employees of the school system who retire after tenure.

The decision was made after accepting the resignation of Mabry Copley, a school mechanic in charge of delivering gas for 33 years.

Copley retired Dec. 31. The board also agreed to have all insurance agents in Warren County attend the next session to discuss the school system's fire insurance coverage.

In a follow-up to last month's auditor's report, the board was informed that five of the auditor's recommendations were being acted upon.

The auditor earlier advised the school system to:

— Follow a statewide practice of appointing a payroll disbursing in each school.

— Employ legal counsel.

— Maintain a stricter policy recording the receipt

—A CORRECTION—

In last week's The Warren Record, an article regarding a conflict between church and school sponsored programs was misleading. The article stated that Richard Bender represented several churches. Bender, in fact, did not represent any church but appeared before the board to voice his concern and the concern felt by other parents who may have faced similar problems in their churches.

Former Town Manager Gets Soul City Post

Former Warrenton town manager William S. Davis, Jr., has been employed as consultant for the Soul City Company, it was announced this week by company president Floyd B. McKissick, Sr.

Davis will work under the supervision of Lewis H. Myers, assistant vice president for corporate and institutional development. His employment was effective Monday.

In making the announcement, McKissick said that "the town's (Warrenton's) loss is our gain. Bill Davis is the kind of person it takes to build a community. He is dedicated, hard working, forthright and farsighted. He brings certain skills which the company can use."

As a native of Warren County and as one who has had previous involvement with Soul City through the development of the regional water and sewer system, Davis will be "an asset" to Soul City, McKissick said.

In working with Myers, Davis will work initially with the Soul City Sanitary District, the community's unit of government. He will also assist with the financing arrangements and proposal for the sewage treatment plant, in the review and restructuring of utility plans and in the development of operational plans for a voluntary fire department.

Further assignments involve planning in the areas of historic presentation program, public safety program and in grant preparations.

Davis said he is "extremely happy" to be working with Soul City, feels his skills and contacts gained while working for Warrenton can be used to aid in the area's development.

"Much progress has already been made and I shall now have the opportunity to assist in seeing that the programs do not fall short of their intended goals," Davis said.

The company division in which Davis will be working is responsible for developing Soul City through working with local, state and federal governmental agencies.

Register Lists

Thornton House

The Mansfield Thornton House in Warrenton has been entered in the National Register of Historic Places, it was learned Tuesday from Rep. L. H. Fountain in Washington, D. C.

The post-Civil War home located on the Baltimore Road near the county landfill, was once the home of Mansfield Thornton, a prominent black resident in Warren County.

Its entry into the National Register was listed by the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior.

The influenza epidemic of 1918 killed 10 million more people than were killed in World War I. Half a million were U. S. victims.
