Keep Plants Healthy By Liquid Feeding

Don't forget to give your house plants proper care during the warm outside gardening months. You'll want them green and healthy next winter when they will be the center of attention again.

The best method of feeding your house plants is to use liquid fertilizer. suggest Agricultural Extension Service specialists at North Carolina State University.

If a soluble fertilizer is used, be sure to follow the manufacturer's instructions. If a dry garden type fertilizer is used, dissolve one teaspoonful in a quart of warm water. Stir well and let stand overnight before using, then use enough of the solution around well established plants to wet the soil well.

If some of the plants have outgrown the containers and become root-bound, repot into a larger container. A good potting medium is a mixture of three parts loamy soil, two parts peat moss and one part coarse sand. To this mixture add one cup of 20 percent superphosphate to each bushel of prepared soil. Bone meal may be substituted for the superphosphate.

Many house plants do better out of doors in the summer, if they are adapted to outdoor conditions. They may be grown on porches, terraces or in the garden border. This would not apply to African violets and certain sensitive specimens.

A good way to carry many types of house plants through the summer is to bury them up to the rim of their containers in a choice site out-of-doors. A layer of gravel at the base of each pot will assure good drainage.

Eclipses The highest number of eclipses possible in one year is seven. In 1935 there were five solar and two lunar eclipses recorded. Four solar and three lunar eclipses will occur in 1982. The lowest possible number of eclipses in a year is two, both of which must be solar, as in 1944 and 1969.
