In Memoriam

In memory of our daughter, Julia Adams Cox Harris.

A Special Breed
For everyone who knew her
She always had a smile
See God thought we needed some sunshine
So He just loaned her to us awhile.

I think everyone thought she was special
To frown there was no need
Because she would fill your heart with laughter
Because she was a special breed.

But God works in many mysterious ways
Because she was only twenty-seven
But He wanted her for an angel
So she went with Him to heaven.

Julia knew she was a special breed
With her thoughts and love and smile
So she left us a part of her,
She left us our only grandchild.

She got her mansion early
And sometime we may not think its fair
But she was His all along
Because a special breed is rare.

But one day we'll go and join her
On that glad reunion day
Cause God promised us a mansion
And together we'll always stay.

Say They're Off Their Rockers

Back-Packing Grandmoms Hit Road

Two back-packing grandmothers who are hiking their way from Las Vegas, Nev. to Washington, D. C. made a stop in Warrenton Wednesday night.

Jan Rose, 62, and her sister-in-law Louise Rose, 58, were spotted on U. S. 1 near Franklinton by Mrs. Louise Culler, wife of the pastor of North Warrenton Baptist Church. Mrs. Culler invited the twosome to attend prayer meeting at the church and spend the night in Warrenton.

They were given a night's lodging at the home of Miss Mabel Rooker and the next morning they were taken back to U. S. 1 by Miss Rooker's sister, Zola Peoples. They hoped to be in South Hill, Va. by nightfall.

The Roses left their Las Vegas homes last October and began their trek across country toting 45-pound knapsacks. Although they had to stop for the winter due to severe cold in the midwest, they resumed their trip last month.

They have a standing appointment to visit President Reagan, a fellow senior citizen, when they arrive in Washington.

Their motto, "Walking Senior Citizens, We're Off Our Rockers" is their way of telling the world that there is a lot more for older Americans to do than rock.

Before beginning the journey, Louise was a hotel cashier, a job she had held for 30 years, and Jan was a 35-year veteran gaming dealer and government worker.

They now pay their way with the help of Jan's Social Security and Louise's widow's pension.

Although their original destination was the nation's capital, there was talk of continuing on to Maine when they were here last week.

Those who met the lively duo hope to hear more from their new-found friends—wherever they are.

trucks in its fleet.

This past January, the Interstate Commerce Commission granted the firm a license to haul materials in 31 states in the Eastern United States.

"This has enabled us to serve many new customers and to haul a variety of new commodities," Bugg said.

"We are pleased to welcome Claude to our staff and look forward to utilizing his expertise as we expand."

Eastern Motor Lines, which had revenues of $1.91 million last year, was founded in 1961 by the late W. S. Bugg and C. M. Bullock, and is now solely owned by the Bugg family.
